TAYLOR TO REPORT

U.S. May Send Heavier Forces To Asian Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration is seriously considering some further redeployment of forces in the Western Pacific to prepare for expanded military operations in Southeast Asia if they become necessary.

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, new ambassador to South Viet Nam, is flying to Saigon today, however, with instructions to try to win the anti-Communist war without carrying the fight to Communist North Viet Nam.

Taylor presently plans to spend about two months in South Viet Nam to see whether the U.S.-supported government and military forces can improve their operations.

Taylor is expected then to return to Washington to report to President Johnson and review the question whether the war should be expanded — unless some Communist thrust in the meanwhile triggers its expansion.

There are several developments which could bring about a rapid expansion of the Southeast Asian conflict or a considerable increase in U.S. intervention in it.

Any serious threat posed by the Communist forces in Laos to the Mekong River valley and neighboring Thailand would in the judgment of strategists here bring a quick U.S. reaction, possibly in concert with other South East Asia Treaty Organization allies.

A request from Thailand for U.S. ground forces to help deal with such a threat, is probably the only circumstance which would bring about the dispatch of U.S. ground troops into Southeast Asia in the predictable future. The present judgement of the policymakers, diplomatic and military, is to use U.S. airpower if it is decided to strike more heavily at Communist positions in Laos or to go into aerial attack against Red military positions and supply lines in North Viet Nam.

Air attacks against North Viet Nam very likely would be ordered, authorities here believe, if Hanoi undertook to expand significantly the Communist military effort in South Viet Nam.

Reds Wound 2 Americans; Capture Post

Guerrillas Swarm Camp; Burn, Loot, Leave 45 Killed

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Communist guerrillas, under cover of heavy mortar and machine gun fire, overran a U.S. training camp for Vietnamese in the central highlands Saturday in an attack apparently timed for Independence Day. Forty-five government troops were killed, 23 others and 2 Americans were wounded.

Seven U.S. Special Forces men led the survivors to safety through the jungles.

TAKE WEAPONS

U.S. advisers said the Reds swarmed into the camp at Polei Krong, about 250 miles north of Saigon, near Kontum, burning and looting. They carried off a number of weapons.

"We had plenty of word that the Viet Cong would try something to commemorate July 4," a U.S. adviser said. "They apparently decided on Polei Krong."

The attack started at 1 a.m., after two of the four companies at the camp left on patrol with five Americans.

Heavy mortar fire pounded into the hillside camp at the start. Then the Viet Cong troops advanced across barbed wire entanglements, under cover of machine gun fire. U.S. officers said that between 30 and 40 Viet Cong were seen to fall under fire from the defenders.

But within an hour, the Viet Cong hammered at the walls inside the perimeter. At this stage the U.S. commander ordered the camp abandoned.

The government forces carried their wounded along a river bank, deep into the jungle as a rear guard unit held back the Viet Cong. There they hid until the Viet Cong left at dawn.

Polei Krong camp was established a year ago as a training base for local tribesmen. It is near the Laotian border and is one of a score guarding border areas.

In the south, meanwhile, about 1,500 Vietnamese troops marched with their American advisers in observance of U.S. Independence Day. The parade was held at My Tho, in the Mekong River delta.

Negroes Ire Gov. Wallace Rally Crowd

States Righters Use Fists, Seats To Pummel Three

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Three Negro members of a civil rights group were mobbed and beaten when they walked into a states rights rally where Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama brought his unpledged elector campaign Saturday.

Walking directly into the middle of a large grandstand with 7,000 of the more than 10,000 persons present, the Negroes were immediately pummelled and beaten to the cement steps with fold-up metal chairs and fists.

GIRL ESCAPES

A white girl accompanying the Negro men, all members of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, said she escaped a beating when a white man shielded her with his body. She said he received several blows before police reached them.

Several white spectators caught one of the Negro men in the stands and hurled him onto the concrete steps, raining blow after blow on him, while other white persons chased the other two Negro men to a wire fence at the front of the stands.

There, they caught one and ran the other into a corner, hurling the metal chairs and using them as clubs.

Police pushed their way through to the Negroes and took them out in a paddy wagon. Officers and highway patrolmen had difficulty reaching them because of an eight-foot fence on one side and the press of the crowd on the other. Three officers suffered slight injuries.

The Negroes, two of them with blood streaming from head cuts, were taken to a hospital where a spokesman said they were not injuried seriously.

The SNCC identified them as Charles Neblett, 23, Carbondale, Ill.; Matthew Jones, 26, Knoxville, Tenn., and Wilson Brown, 30, Brimingham.

The civil rights group said they and the white girl, Karen Haverman, 19, went to the rally "just to hear the speeches."

Police said there were no arrests.

The Negroes appeared and the violence broke out during a speech by former Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi. Urging the crowd not to give up the fight for states rights, Barnett said, "Are you with me in this fight? Are you in this fight to win?"

The violence erupted at this point.

Wallace, speaking after the incident, urged Georgians to join with Alabama and other Southern states in a mass vote to keep either Republicans or Democrats from getting a majority of electoral votes in the November presidential election.

The Alabama governor quieted rumbling in the crowd at one pit with the statement, "Now, let's all be in a good humor and friendly."

Baton - twirling Cherie Jean Martin, a Northeast Louisiana State College student, Saturday night won the first Miss Louisiana beauty pageant to be held in Monroe.

Miss Martin broke a long-standing jinx that had previous talent and swimsuit division winners faltering at the end. She won in the swimsuit division Thursday night and came back Friday night to win the talent competition.

BEAUTY CROWNED

Last year, Linda Gail Baucum of Springhill won both talent and swimsuit divisions, only to be nudged out in the finals by Judy Cathey of West Monroe. But Miss Baucum was declared the winner when Miss Cathey declined the crown.

Miss Martin, a favorite with the capacity crowd that watched in a very warm Neville Auditorium, was crowned as the new state beauty queen by Ira Phillips, president of the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the pageant.

This was the 15th annual edition of the Miss Louisiana Pageant, and the first time it had been held in Monroe. It had previously been held in Lake Providence.

Miss Martin was entered in the contest as Miss Rapides Parish. She has won several other beauty and talent titles, including Miss Majorette of America, 1963. Miss Martin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Martin of 106 Tudor St., Pineville.

The runnerups were:

First — J. Cheryl Peterson, 19, Queen Holiday in Dixie, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Peterson Sr. of Ringgold, La. She was the winner in swimsuit competition Friday night.

Second — Patricia Marie Ragusa, 18, Miss Greater New Orleans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ragusa of Marrero, La., who was also accorded the Miss Talent title for her singing. Among the songs were "I Could Have Danced All Night."

Judged tops in talent was Judith Goss, 19, Miss Union Parish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Goss, and sponsored by the Farmerville Jaycees. Her portrayal of Anna in a selection from the "King and I" did it for her.

Betty Kathleen Mooney, 18, Miss Bastrop, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald W. Mooney of Bastrop, was voted "Miss Congeniality" by the contestants in the pageant. She was not one of the top ten finalists.

Rounding out the top ten were:

Paula Kathleen Covington, 18, Miss Sulphur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Covington of Sulphur; Mary Lynn Taylor, 19, Miss Gonzales, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor of Gonzales; Linda Karen Graves, 20, Miss Shreveport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Graves of Marshall, Tex.; Diane Marie Burnum, 17, Miss Jackson Parish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Burnum of Jonesboro, and Deana Lorentzen, 19, Miss Baton Rouge, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Lorentzen of Carlsbad, N.M.

To rousing bullfight music, Miss Martin's talent entitled "Toreador," consisted of whirling with a red cape to the music, switching to a baton, and ending with a fantastic

ONE VICTIM GIRL, 6

Area Accidents Claim Two Lives

Holiday traffic accidents claimed the lives of two Twin City residents during the weekend, one a West Monroe girl, the other a Monroe Negro.

Six-year-old Dixie Ann Fortenberry of West Monroe was killed Saturday in a head-on collision at the intersection of Highways 15 and 133, about 15 miles east of Monroe.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Fortenberry of 105 Coleman Ave., West Monroe.

OTHERS INJURED

The Fortenberry girl was riding in a car driven by her grandfather, John W. Sykes of West Monroe. Sykes was admitted to St. Francis Hospital where his injuries were not believed serious. Four other members of the Fortenberry family in the same car were treated for minor injuries and released.

According to investigating state police, driver of the other vehicle was a 49 - year - old Alto Negro, Daniel Bracy. Bracy was traveling west on Highway 15 when he apparently swerved into the path of the eastbound Sykes vehicle. The accident happened about 10 a. m.

Bracy was placed in the Richland Parish jail after being booked on charges of negligent homicide and driving on the wrong side of the road.

The Fortenberry girl was Richland Parish's 12th traffic fatality of 1964.

A 22 - year - old Monroe Negro, Felix Little of 1312½ Olive St., was fatally injured when the car he was driving failed to negotiate a curve on Nutland Lane Road, about 1½ miles from the Monroe city limits. State police said Little was traveling north when his convertible car apparently went out of control, spun into a ditch, turned over and skidded about 300 feet before coming to a halt.

There were no other passengers in the vehicle.

Funeral services for the Fortenberry girl will be Monday at 10 a. m. in Mulhearn Funeral Home with the Rev. W. V. Jones officiating.

Other survivors include a brother, Roy Edward Fortenberry; two sisters, Teresa Janine and Robin Gale; paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Fortenberry; maternal grandmother, Mrs. John W. Sykes, all of West Monroe.

Burial will be in Hasley Cemetery under direction of Mulhearn Funeral Home of Monroe.

Boats Collide; 1 Goes Down

VIGO, Spain (AP)— Ships searched the sea off Cape Finisterre, on Spain's east coast, Saturday for 18 crewmen missing from the Spanish tanker Bonifaz, which sank in flames after colliding with a French tanker.

Four sailors were known dead and the missing were presumed to have perished.

Crewmen on the 32,125-ton French tanker Fabiola reported no deaths. Their ship caught fire after the collision in thick fog, but the flames were extinguished by the crew.

The dead and 31 survivors from the Bonifaz were brought to Vigo by rescue vessels.

NEW MISS LOUISIANA

Radiant Winner Thinks Of Home

By CAROL BRAXTON
World Staff Writer

Brown eyes shining with happiness, Louisiana's new queen of beauty's first thoughts after being named Miss Louisiana Saturday night were of home.

"I'm going home to my wonderful hometown of Pineville," said the Northeast Louisiana State College coed, Cherie Martin. She was chosen as Miss Louisiane from 33 contestants at Neville Auditorium.

WELL WISHERS

Miss Martin's statement was made as a huge throng of well-wishers crowded down on her as she stood holding her trophy.

Second runner - up, Patricia Marie Ragusa, "Miss Greater New Orleans" also won the outstanding talent award. She sang "I Enjoy Being a Girl," and "I Could Have Danced All Night."

"After this (the pageant) I'll be a heavy weight," was Miss Ragusa's reaction to the two large trophies she received as awards for her talent and beauty.

Miss Holiday in Dixie, Cheryl Peterson was first runner-up, and was popular with the audience. Each time she appeared on stage there was whistling, shouts and rounds of applause.

"I've never been so surprised in my whole life," exclaimed Miss Congeniality, Miss Kathy Mooney of Bastrop.

"It's just like a father awaiting his first child," said Palmer Willett of Tallulah, the driver of Miss Martin's car and a member of the Circle K Club of Northeast State College, a service club which provided chauffeurs and escorts for the contestants.

He said he was so nervous he didn't know what to do. "She's the queen," was his declaration after each sentence.

Miss Martin said she had been practicing her talent since her last twirling win in October. Her talent idea was a combination of ideas from all the members of her family, her twirling instructor and a "few things I threw in myself."

Miss Martin had won the swimsuit competition Thursday followed by a win in the talent division Friday night.

She reigned at the coronation ball held at the Paragon Club Saturday night following the pageant finals at Neville.

After the announcement of her name as winner of the pageant she walked down the ramp to greet her subjects. She kept saying, "It's so wonderful."

Several times she said, "I'm so pleased. I'm so very, very happy."

Miss America, Donna Axum of El Dorado, Ark. in Monroe for the event, said that Miss Martin was her choice. She said "her talent was so professional and polished and she was so poised and graceful."

Holiday Toll Reaches 375

By United Press International

The holiday weekend death toll slowly mounted toward the 400 mark late Saturday, and the National Safety Council said the toll was coming closer to their predictions for a record number of deaths.

A United Press International survey at 12:30 a.m., EDT showed 256 persons killed in traffic accidents since the start of the holiday.

The breakdown:
Traffic	256
Drownings	78
Planes	3
Miscellaneous	38
Total	375

California led the nation with 39 traffic deaths, Texas had 19, Illinois 12, New York 11 and Pennsylvania 10. Wyoming, New Hampshire and Rhode Island reported no weekend traffic deaths.

Troops Stop Panamanian Youth March

PANAMA (AP)— Panamanian National Guardsmen, firing shots into the air and tossing tear gas grenades, Saturday broke up an attempted student march on Shaler Plaza in the U.S.-controlled Canal Zone.

No Americans were involved.

Fifteen demonstrators were arrested, including Floyd Britton, identified as a ranking leftist Panamanian student leader who has been in the forefront of past anti-U.S. demonstrations.

A National Guard officer said no one was wounded, but a couple of demonstrators suffered minor injuries in a brief scuffle and fist fight between guardsmen and demonstrators.

After an original group that grew from about 30 to 100 persons was chased from the border of the Canal Zone and downtown Panama City, a second group formed in front of the city's biggest high school. Three speakers, one of them Britton's brother, threatened further demonstrations if those arrested were not released within 24 hours.

There was also a threat of disrupting an annual Fourth of July horse - racing program at the Presidente Ramon Track. But guardsmen reported no further incidents.

Shaler Plaza, also known as Shaler Triange, was the scene of some of the worst rioting during last January's flag-raising incident that led to the deaths of more than 20 persons, including four U.S. soldiers. It is a crossing point on the zonal border with an entrance from Panama City's Central Ave.

ELLENDER TELLS PEOPLE

Way Must Be Law If Act Challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Southern senator who fought long and hard against the civil rights bill said Saturday flagrant and possibly violent disobedience of the new law would be "foolhardy and indefensible."

If enforcement of the act is to be resisted, said Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., "it must be within the framework of the orderly processes established by law.

"Any other course is foolhardy and indefensible — much more indefensible and dangerous than it might have been at some other time in our nation's past."

Ellender said he can not agree with those "who advocate opposition."

Laws enacted by Congress, he said, must be respected until changed or repealed by Congress or declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

If such laws can be defied with impunity by citizens or groups of citizens, he said, "then the respect for all law will be diminished" and the result would be widespread strife and discord.

Ellender said that undoubtedly the new law will be resisted in many parts of the South and "there is no doubt that it will be difficult to enforce." But, he added, resistance must be through orderly legal processes.

"I have deplored emotionalism on the part of our legislators," Ellender said, "and if the need should arise, I shall deplore it on the part of the Southern citizenry. The coming months will be trying ones for all of us, but the difficulty must be met with calm and reason, and not with violence and emotion."

In recent months, Ellender said, much has been said about the concept of civil disobedience. Followers of this belief, he said, feel they have no duty to obey bad or unjust laws.

He is, he said, opposed to any such doctrine.

Searching Tars Leave Hunting For Missing 3

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) —Weary sailors quit under a hot noon sun Saturday in the search for three civil rights workers who are missing in Mississippi.

It was not known when the 400 Navy men will rejoin federal and state officials in scouring the east-central Mississippi countryside for the trio who vanished June 21.

The sailors and other investigators got a late start on the morning of Independence Day. Rain, which began pouring down Friday, did not let up until early Saturday. The searchers returned to their grim task about 9 a.m.

Only the sailors took part of the holiday off. It was presumed they returned to McCain Field, a Navy base, near Meridian, Miss.

The search moved Saturday into the hot, damp and muddy woodlands and swamps of Leake County, the last of the four counties adjacent to Neshoba County of which Philadelphia is the county seat. The trio was last seen in Philadelphia after they posted a $20 bond on a traffic charge.

The search parties combed portions of Kemper, Newton and Winston counties before shifting to Leake County.

Still missing, as the search went into its 13th day, were Michael Schwerner and Andrew Goodman, two white New Yorkers, and James Chaney, Meridian Negro.

DEGAULLE LEAVES BONN

German, French Leaders Agree To Seek Ways Of Political Unity

BONN, Germany (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle of France and Chancellor Ludwig Erhard of West Germany wound up two days of conferences Saturday by agreeing to make new efforts toward European political unity. But their ideas on how this should be achieved remained far apart.

In an unscheduled, hour-long private meeting, Erhard promised the French leader to put forth some West German proposals. The assurances seemed largely designed to smoothe over what one high-ranking German source termed clearly different views of Europe's future.

A government spokesman declined to comment on the nature of the proposals but made clear there was no plan for setting up any additional French-German agency.

The West German move carried the evident risk of antagonizing the United States and other partners in the North Atlantic alliance and the European Common Market known to be concerned that further cementing of Bonn-Paris ties could result in the formation of a bloc inside the Western alliance.

The fears were fanned by DeGaulle's reference to the desire that the French-West German union "be accomplished and completed."

One of his arguments in pleading for tighter links between the two countries was that the U.S. attention would shift from Europe to Communist China.

Erhard, however, ruled out any path toward European unity that was not acceptable to Germany's other partners and the promise to make new proposals apparently was as far as he was prepared to go. He expected before long to explain to Bonn's other allies that this does not mean a change in West German policies.

Unqualified support for De Gaulle's conception came from former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, a conspicuous background figure in the Bonn talks, who met with De Gaulle and later announced "full agreement."

This pointed again to a rift inside the ruling Christian Democratic party where Adenauer has retained strong influence following his resignation from the chancellorship last October.

Except for the extended talk with Adenauer, De Gaulle's face hardly lit up during the two day visit. There were also smaller crowds and a lack of emotional trimmings that marked the earlier conferences under the French-German treaty.

The differences over the European unity question were not the only ones spelled out in the conferences, which drew Premier Georges Pompidou and most of his cabinet ministers to Bonn for what amounted to joint French-German cabinet sessions.

West German agriculture Minister Werner Schwarz reported that no progress had been made toward agreement on a common grain price and other farming issues stalling European Common Market negotiations.

Neither was any agreement achieved in discussions of Germany's proposal for a 25 per cent cut in joint tariffs on imports from outside the Common Market.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Two men were killed and a third was injured in the crash of a light plane one mile west of the Tulsa North Airport Saturday.

The dead men were Glen A. Yates, 34, Grand Prairie, Tex., and Larry Eugene Wicker, 25, Irving, Tex. Seriously injured was Francis Wehr, 24, Stillwater, Okla.

Authorities said the plane, a Cessna 172, failed to gain enough speed during the takeoff, slammed into a fence and hit some trees. It did not catch fire.

times a year

Look at it this way: 8% is nearly 78% greater than 4½%. Or, figured in dollars. If your funds now earn $100 in annual interest, they could be earning $177.77 in interest at Affiliated Investment Corporation. Big difference, isn't it?

And, Affiliated's big 8% annual interest rate works just as well, percentage-wise, for small investors as it does for larger accounts. Interest is computed and paid 12 times a year—on the first of each month.

Earnings aren't everything, of course. You must consider the Company you're doing business with. Affiliated, since its inception, has had a perfect record of interest payments to its investors and requests for funds have always been met immediately.

Why not open, (or add to) you Affiliated Investment Corporation Investment account now? If you prefer, invest by mail; we pay postage both ways. Funds placed by the 15th of any month earn from the 1st. If you want to increase your Investment income, bag that big 8% at Affiliated. It's not peanuts.

Righters Vow Full Support For New Law

NEW YORK (AP)—The nation's major civil rights organizations say that with the Civil Rights Act of 1964—two days old Independence Day—the "historic spirit of America has now been embodied in the law of the land."

They have vowed to support President Johnson's program to achieve compliance with the law, saying in a Fourth of July statement: "We look forward to an end to the need for protest and contest."

But these groups — the NAACP, CORE, the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, the National Urban League and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference — add that "where there is defiance of the congressional mandate, we will use all lawful means to eliminate it."

In the first early testing of the historic law, segregation of public accommodations silently fell away in many Southern cities and towns. Negroes quietly gained service at restaurants and theaters in Alabama, Maryland, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida—in places of stiff restance before President Johnson signed the act Thursday night.

While the older and larger civil rights groups were praising the law, enthusiasm was restrained among some of the newer, smaller and more militant groups. Most, but not all, of the latter groups are small Northern organizations, which feel the law will have its primary effect in the South.

A leader of two New York City school boycotts, the Rev. Milton A. Galamison, said the bill's greatest effect in the North would be to "create an atmosphere in which the struggle for equality can be renewed."

Lawrence Landry, 28, of Chicago, who led a boycott that took 300,000 youngsters out of Chicago schools, said the new law "will not have much effect in the North. We're going to continue our emphasis on housing and jobs for the rest of the summer, then work on the fall election."

In Detroit, the Rev. Albert S. Cleage, a director in a new, militant organization called GOAL for Group on Advanced Leadership, said "the Negro has come to the place where he no longer trusts an empty legal victory.

"MY FAIR LADY," the musical favorite to be seen at air-conditioned Strauss Playhouse from July 24 through August 2, tells the story of a cockney flower girl who is transformed into a fine lady through the efforts of a speech professor. Here Eliza, played by Camille Wood (seated), bewails her spilled flowers, while Freddy, played by Frank Swindle (kneeling), tries to comfort her. Observing are Garland Moore (left) as Col. Pickering and Pat Fraze (right) as Mrs. Higgins. The Little Theatre box office on Lamy Lane will open July 15. Meanwhile tickets for "My Fair Lady" may be ordered from Box 868, Monroe, at $3.75 for adults and $2.50 for students.

IN WAYNE COUNTY

Oil Zone Found In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A new producing zone has been opened in the deep Wausau field of Wayne County with the Chismor Co. testing its Ulmer Pryor No. 1A, sec. 21-8N-9W, from a Tuscaloosa oil sand at 7,443-55 feet.

The important well was drilled to 12,190 feet and failed to log the Rodessa and Sligo oil sands below 11,400 feet that are productive in the field. It is reported the well is flowing a small amount of oil and will be completed as a pumper with over 80 feet of oil sand logged in the Tuscaloosa formation.

In the fast developing Wilcox sand country of southwest Mississippi another new oil field find is assured in Wilkinson County. Jones-O'Brien has officially completed its wildcat, the Leake Estate No. 1, sec. 33-4N-2W, pumping at the rate of 112 barrels of oil per day from perforations in the Wilcox at 7,148-53 feet.

Also in Wilkinson County, Francis, Fortenberry and Jack Daniel are running production tests at their wildcat, the Crosby No. 1, sec. 26-4N-1W, east of the Darrington Field. Operators perforated and tested a Wilcox sand at 7,030 feet.

In the recently-discovered Mt. Olive field of Smith County, Pan American Petroleum Corp. has completed its Richardson No. 1, Sec. 32-10N-16W, as a small gas well from the Eutaw zone. The well guaged 320,000 cubic feet of gas per day from perforations at 7,084-06 feet. The well was drilled by Triad Oil and Gas Co. to 13,018 feet and failed to log the deep producing zone below 12,600 feet found in the discovery well. Pan American assumed operations and set casing to 8,050 feet to test the Eutaw gas shows.

Pan American is drilling below 14,300 feet in its important Scott County wildcat, the U.S.A.-Bell No. 1, sec. 18-5N-8E, a 15,500 foot test to explore the Smackover lime formation.

In the Bienville Forest field of Smith County, Austral Oil Co. is below 7,100 feet in its federal lease No. 1, sec. 11-4N-9E, north of the discovery well. The Bienville Forest Field discovered last year has one well producing from the Smackover below 14,100 feet.

Edwards-Murray Oil Company's No. 2, Keys sec. 35-9N-1W, in the 19-year-old Flora Field of Madison County is continuing to flow and pump at the rate of 400 barrels of oil per day. Completion is from a perforated sand in the Selma gas rock formation at 4,370-76 feet.

Danes, Yankees Celebrate Fourth

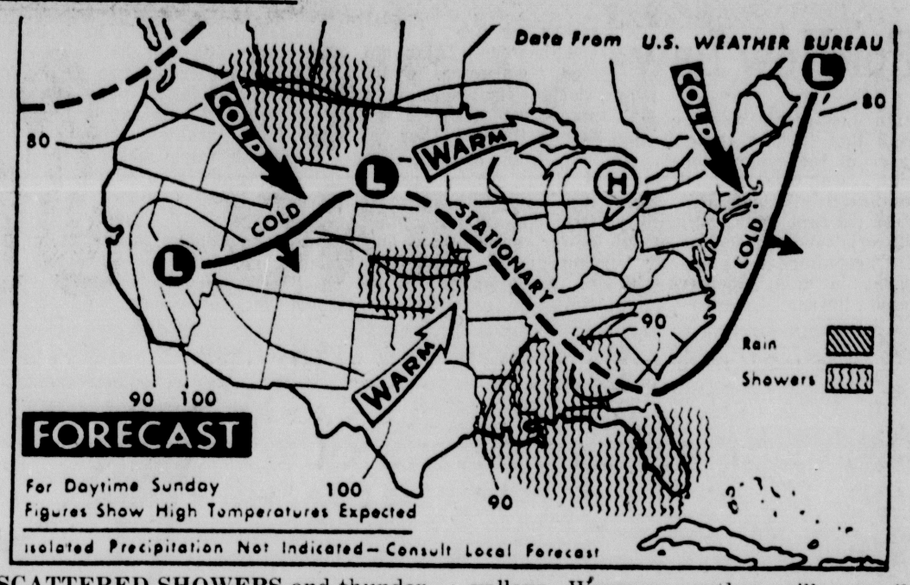
REBILD HILLS, Denmark (UPI) — More than 25,000 Danes and Americans rallied Saturday at Rebild Park, northern Jutland, to celebrate the 188th anniversary of the American Declaration of Independence.

Rebild Park where Denmark's first July 4 rally was held 52 years ago is the only place outside the United States where Independence Day celebration is celebrated on such a scale.

King Frederik, Queen Ingrid and their three daughters attended the celebration.

Kingman Brewster Jr., president of Yale University, called it a "glorious family picnic."

President Johnson, in a recorded message, greeted his "friends of Denmark, whose annual celebration of the Fourth of July is a warm and wonderful expression of the close and abiding friendship between our countries and between our peoples.' '



SCATTERED SHOWERS and thundershowers will fall today in northern plateau, central plains, Gulf coast states and Florida. Cooler weather will prevail over north, central and south Atlantic states, the Ohio and Tennessee valleys. Warmer weather will prevail in upper and middle Mississippi valley and southern plains. Rest of the U.S. will be mostly fair to partly cloudy with little temperature change. (AP Wirephoto Map)

JUSTICES' SALARIES

Pay Slash Against Court Appears Nearly Restored

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chances appeared bright Saturday that a $5,000 slash voted by the Senate in pay increases for the nine justices of the Supreme Court will be restored in part.

Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont, who supported the cutback, told a reporter that the high court members probably will get more than the $2,500 annual boost allowed by the Senate.

Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney, D-Okla., who warned fellow senators in vain that this was not the time "to downgrade the Supreme Court" agreed with Mansfield.

Monroney noted in a separate interview that numerous differences between Senate and House versions of a pay boost of some $564 million a year for most government officials and employes must be compromised later.

The House approved a $7,500 increase for all federal judges —the same as that voted for Senate and House members— but the Senate by a 46-40 vote reduced the increase for the nine Supreme Court justices to $2,500 each.

Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., sponsored the proposal to limit the justices' pay increase, arguing that the present difference between their salary and that of congressmen is out of proportion to their respective responsibilities and expenses.

The eight associate justices now get $35,000 a year and Chief Justice Earl Warren receives $35,500.

Members of Congress now get $22,500, the same as some 400 federal district court judges. Federal Circuit court judges receive $25,500.

There was some talk in Senate corridors that the high court cutback was a retaliation from some senators for the controversial decisions on civil rights, apportionment of state legislatures and similar matters.

Monroney said this probably was a factor but Mansfield denied that this influenced his vote.

"There are a lot of things in the pay increases bill with which I disagreed," Mansfield said. "The justices are appointed for life and receive full pay on retirement, without contribution."

On the showdown vote 28 Democrats, including most of the Southerners who fought the civil rights bill, and 18 Republicans, including several who face re-election this year, voted for the cut.

Opposed were 29 Democrats and 11 Republicans.

Monroe Motel Robbed Of $350 By Armed Negro

A shotgun armed Negro held up the office of a motel here Saturday and made off with about $350 in small denomination bills.

The robbery was reported to Monroe police by Iva W. Walters, clerk at the Travel Inn Motel, who told officers a Negro, with his face partially hidden by a handkerchief and carrying a shotgun, entered the office about 2 a.m. She said he took the money and fled, apparently on foot.

Investigating police said the motel area was surrounded by officers in minutes after the robbery was reported, but no arrests have been made.

Monroe police also booked four persons Saturday on charges of driving while intoxicated and reckless driving.

Calvin Smith, 37, of 7724 Mistletoe, St., Metarie, was booked on the charges along with charges of disturbing the peace and property damage after his arrest at Florida Street and Winnsboro Road at 1:55 a.m.

Jesse Jenkins, 32, of 1404 Ouachita Ave., was booked on the charges plus a count of speeding after his arrest at N. 19th and DeSiard Streets at 2:25 a.m. Wallace Strong, 48, of 2327 Adams St., was booked on DWI, reckless driving, speeding and no driver's license counts after his arrest at 5:20 a.m. in the 2900 block of Renwick St.

Will Collins, 28, of Houston, Tex., was booked on counts of driving while intoxicated, reckless driving and speeding after his arrest at 13:35 p.m. Saturday at DeSiard and S. Grand Streets.

West Monroe police booked Alvester Paggett, 38, of Jonesboro, on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper brakes after his arrest on Cypress Street at 8:33 p.m. Saturday.

Chinese Claim Fighter-Bomber Downed In Laos

TOKYO (AP)—The New China News Agency said Saturday a U.S.-made T28 fighter-bomber was shot down by a soldier on Pathet Lao-held territory in Laos last Wednesday.

The agency, quoting a spokesman for the Pathet Lao command, said the plane was brought down by light machine gun fire about 12 miles southwest of Pathet Lao headquarters at Khang Khay.

The report did not say what happened to the pilot. The United States has supplied T28s to the Laotian Air Force.

SAYS THURSTON MORTON

Easterners Need Faster Convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Thruston B. Morton, R-Ky., said Saturday he will ask the Republican National Convention to speed up the process of nominating presidential candidates to prevent television coverage stretching into the after-midnight hours in the East.

Morton, the convention's permanent chairman, said that among other things he will ask the Rules Committee to cut the time allotment for presidential nominating speeches to 10 minutes. Previously such presentations often have run much longer despite the existence of a 15-minute rule.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said in a separate interview that if the 10-minute rule is installed he will abide by it in placing in nomination the name of Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, leading contender for the prize.

"I've often heard it said that no souls are saved after 10 minutes," Dirksen commented.

If the time is limited and he is given authority to enforce it, Morton said he also will propose that no more than four seconding speeches be permitted for each candidate and that they be limited to three minutes each.

Morton has been trying to convince favorite son candidates they ought to pass up the honor of being nominated formally. He wants to cut down on the flood of oratory of the kind he recalled engulfed the 1952 GOP convention—last in which there was any real fight over the nomination—for endlessly wearing hours.

The convention chairman hasn't met with much success in this endeavor.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, who is backed by Maine 14-vote delegation, is reported to have indicated she wants her name to be placed in nomination because of the interest women have shown in her campaign for the party's top nomination.

The 48-vote Michigan delegation has designated Rep. Gerald R. Ford to place Gov. George Romney's name in nomination.

Morton said that if a large number of candidates are going to be placed in nomination, he will suggest that the convention have a Wednesday morning session to start that process. As matters stand the nomination speeches are scheduled to begin at an afternoon session and, with three hours difference in the time, might not be completed until early morning in the Eastern Time Zone.

"I think we are going to have to get these speeches out of the way so we can have our balloting and acceptance speeches on Thursday," Morton said. "Otherwise the acceptance will have to be made on Friday and I have the feeling that a lot of people will be wanting to get away that day."

STEPHEN WOODRUFF Moncla of Neville High School in Monroe is shown with Dr. John F. Christman of the chemistry department at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, where the student is participating in a summer training science program. Dr. Christman is explaining an instrument which measures the ratio of the charge of an electron to its mass. The nine-week program which ends August 13 is designed to encourage scientific interests of students.

Radio Free Europe Sees 15th Year

NEW YORK (AP)—A small army of men and women rose before dawn Saturday to observe the birth of a voice 15 years ago in a second-hand trailer parked on the outskirts of Munich, Germany.

For the birthday of Radio Free Europe, nothing special was planned.

"We just had our people up and ready to go on the air in Europe by 5 o'clock in the morning," said Sumner Ahlbum, director of the Radio Free Europe Fund.

"We felt that was the best way to observe our anniversary —by doing what we have to do —inform the people behind the Iron Curtain," he said.

The operation, which beams radio programs into Communist dominated countries in Europe, is financed by voluntary donations in America and has sending stations in West Germany and in Portugal.

Just last week the group put into operation the last of four new transmitters in Europe, raising the transmission power by a million watts to 2.25 million.

"With the new transmitters," Ahlbum explained, "we can send deeper into the five countries we serve and not just be heard in the big cities. After all, the rural folk need the Western world news as much as the city dwellers."

The operation, with seven news bureaus in Europe and one each in New York City and Washington, beams its programs to Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

President Johnson recently described Radio Free Europe as a "link between the American people and the freedom-loving peoples of Eastern Europe."

Johnson, while still vice president, broadcast over the network. So did Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy.

When the operation first got under way, and for more than a decade after that, Soviet technicians jammed the programs with static, often reducing them to mere scratching noise.

"But they have not been bothering us lately with jamming," Ahlbum said." We think we know the reason why—money.

"The Soviet orbit jamming complex, when it was in full blast, cost the Russian government about $200 million a year," he said. "They had to have more powerful transmitters than ours and they had to jam all the wave lengths in order to do the job."

The network now employs about 2,000 persons, many of them linguists who translate Western news into the languages of the countries to which the programs are beamed.

During the last year, it cost $12,750,000 — including $1,750,000 for the four new transmitters—to keep the network on the air seven days a week for 18 hours each day in all but Bulgaria and Romania. There, Radio Free Europe is heard seven hours.

The programs include music, religion, commentaries and news.

"About 17 per cent of the entire program each day is devoted to spot news," Ahlbum said. "Next to the jazz music for the teen-agers behind the Iron Curtain, the news is the most popular."

Tennessee Man Heads Officials

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe C. Carr, Tennessee secretary of state for 16 years, was elected president Saturday of the national association of secretaries of state.

Carr, of Nashville, has been vice president of the organization.

Miss Martha Bell Conway of Virginia, was named vice president; Ben Meier, North Dakota, treasurer; Joseph Donovan, Minnesota, secretary, and Victor A. Meyers, Washington, recording secretary.

Convention Chief Predicts Early Goldwater Win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Oregons Gov. Mark Hatfield, Republican National Convention keynoter and temporary chairman, predicted Saturday a first-ballot presidential nomination for Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

"It would be a modern political miracle if anyone, including Gov. William W. Scranton, could take the nomination from the grasp Sen. Goldwater has on it," Hatfield said.

Hatfield told newsmen in an airport interview that Goldwater has probably 100 more delegates than he needs for a first-ballot majority.

He suggested that Rep. William Miller of New York, the party's national chairman, is a likely choice for vice president.

Hatfield and his wife arrived for a five-day second honeymoon at Pebble Beach. They are celebrating their sixth wedding anniversary. He expects to return to San Francisco on July 10 to prepare for the convention opening July 13.

FINAL WEEK OF SESSION

Code Of Ethics, Primary Bills Hold Major Interest

By SAM HANNA
Legislative Writer

The Louisiana Legislature returns to the capitol Monday for the final week of the 1964 session with Gov. John J. McKeithen's proposed Code of Ethics to be the major legislation for consideration.

But the biggest fight is expected to come when Rep. Parey Branton of Webster Parish pushes his bills to put Gov. George Wallace on the ballot with President Johnson in a September preferential primary.

Branton, however, will have to race the clock since the Legislature adjourns sine die Thursday. His bills are still in the House.

With both houses returning at 11 a.m. Monday, the Code of Ethics, which passed the Senate without opposition, is the special order of the day in the House.

McKeithen said before the Legislature adjourned Thursday that he would consider any votes against the Code of Ethics as being "unfriendly to the administration."

But Rep. Risley Triche of Napoleonville is scheduled to offer a motion to return the bill to a committee for another hearing. The legislative bureau warned the House that parts of the bill may be unconstitutional.

A McKeithen floor leader, Rep. Lantz Womack of Winnsboro, said the administration would offer amendments on the foor, if necessary, to correct errors.

Triche and Rep. Ashton B. Collier of Winn Parish voted against the Code of Ethics as it passed the House Judiciary B Committee.

Branton, meantime, will have to hurry if he wants to pass bills to set a September 19th second congressional primary with a possible choice for a presidential primary.

The other Branton bill would direct the Democratic State Central Committee to offer two slates on the November ballot.

This is an assurance to action by the committee to put two slates on the November ballot, but the committee's decision now is being questioned in federal court.

The House, howevre, refused Thursday to let Branton advance the bills for consideration Monday. Unless Branton gets the House to suspend the rules, then the bills will be up for final passage Tuesday.

That would make it awfully difficult to get the bills over to the Senate for a committee hearing, then floor consideration before the Thursday adjournment.

McKeithen said he hopes his administration can stay out of the fight — a position he has taken all along in regards to free electors. The governor said he doesn't know who he'll vote for in the presidential election.

With 1,657 bills introduced in the 60-day session, hundreds of measures died when the Legislature adjourned Thursday. Many of them were appropriation bills, which have to be on the governor's desk five days before adjournment.

The Senate, meantime, has two controversial bills still on the floor — a measure to convert the New Orleans wildlife building into an Opera House and another bill backed by labor to revise the Workmen's Compensation laws.

The Opera House bill was bottled up in committee for the longest, but was brought to the Senate floor before the Senate adjourned early Thursday.

It would take an estimated $3-million to finance the conversion of the Civil Courts Building at 400 Royal Street in the French Quarter of New Orleans.

McKeithen indicated at a Thursday press conference that he was "inclined to wash his hands" of the Workmen's Compensation legislation, explaining that he was unable to reach a compromise between industry and labor.

Industry opposed its own bill in the House after the administration amended it, but the administration then brought practically the same amendments over to the Senate and tacked them onto the labor bill.

The Senate also has a resolution by Rep. Lawrence Gibbs of Monroe calling on the governor to study the state's finances, then advise the Legislature on means of raising revenue for teacher pay raises, plus pay raises for all state employes and improvements for hospitals, colleges and highways.

McKeithen's administration amended the resolution after it started out to pertain to school teachers only. The governor said he had "more to think about than just school teachers."

He is talking about a fall special session to enact the pay raises, but he said his administration was "not talking about taxes at this time."

African Nation Becomes Free

BLANTYRE, Nyasaland (UPI) —Formal celebrations leading to the creation of Africa's newest independent state began Saturday in this tiny land of poverty, disease and ignorance.

At the stroke of midnight Sunday, Nyasaland will be declared free of British rule and become Malawi—the 37th independent republic of Africa.

In advance of Sunday's ceremony, pictures of the first prime minister, Dr. Hastings Banda, were posted in most stores.

Banda began the independence festivities by opening the country's first trade fair at Limbe. Goods from the United States, Britain, West Germany and Portugal were displayed in more than 100 booths.

Constitution Party Looks At Wallace

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Constitution Party delegates who convene here July 23-25 consider Alabama Gov. George Wallace a possible choice to head the national party ticket.

Whether Wallace would accept a third party nomination for president remains speculative.

Jack Carswell, state chairman, said 200 to 300 delegates representing 27 to 30 states are expected to attend the party's "first national convention of consequence." But as many as 2,000 to 3,000 persons could show up, he said.

Houston was selected the convention city during a pre-convention meeting in Indianapolis early this year.

It will be the third national convention for both Houston and Texas. The Democrats met here in 1928 as did the Dixiecrats in 1948.

Curtiss B. Dall, Philadelphia, a former son-in-law of the late President Franklin Roosevelt, is the Constitution Party national chairman and will be temporary convention chairman.

The party platform will be molded and delegates will select a presidential candidate during the three-day convention.

Wallace is considered the most likely prospect. Carswell said the Alabama governor has been asked about accepting the nomination "and we feel he would accept."

Wallace, however,has not said publicly whether he would accept a third party nomination.

"Wallace is interested in the preservation of rights of self-government," Carswell said, "and that is what we are interested in."

Wallace's executive secretary, Earl C. Morgan, conferred privately with leaders of the Constitution Party of Texas during the state convention in Austin June 16.

But the convention took no action to pledge the state party's delegates to the national convention to Wallace.

A number of minor parties have made overtures to Wallace as a possible standard bearer, Morgan said, and "we will be talking with them."

"The governor's over-all plan is to push the unpledged elector idea, and some groups like this apparently are interested in the thing," he said.

Carswell, 41, said it is through the unpledged elector plan his party might elect the next president of the United States.

Should Texas voters support the Constitution Party candidate, so will Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Oklahoma and Arkansas, Carswell said.

IN WEST EUROPE

Once-Aided Lands Now Help Others

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Europe, once the main receiver of aid from America, is now dispensing far more aid abroad than it receives from the United States.

In reporting this Saturday, officials of the Agency for International Development said the days of massive, general U.S. economic assistance to Europe are well past. The $1 billion postwar Marshall Plan which helped the war-ravaged continent back to economic health ended in 1953.

U.S. arms aid to the North Atlantic allies continued high during the 1950s, but is dropping off now. Commercial-type loans and U.S. surplus food deals with Europe are continuing.

Meanwhile, according to AID, the revived European nations are paying off their earlier loans from Uncle Sam and are putting money of their own into various aid programs in less developed countries.

AID, which administers the U.S. worldwide assistance program, has reported to Congress that other free world industrialized countries—the West European nations plus Canada and Japan—stepped up their aid in 1960-62 and apparently again in 1963.

The direct overseas economic assistance of the other countries was listed at $1.8 billion in 1960, $2.4 billion in 1961 and $2.4 billion in 1962. Firm figures are not yet available on the 1963 total.

The grand total of U.S. aid to Europe from fiscal years 1946 through 1963 is listed at $45.8 billion, including $11.2 billion in loans and $34.6 billion in gifts. European repayments to the United States on loans amounted to $6.4 billion in that period.

The yearly U.S. assistance figure for Europe has been declining during the past decade. From highs of $15.3 billion in 1949-52 (mostly Marshall Plan economic aid) and $13 billion in 1953-57 (mostly NATO arms AID), the annual rate dropped to $1.1 billion by 1960.

The 1963 U.S. aid total for Europe came to $847 million, of which $428 million was economic and $419 million military.

CORE Worker Makes Tearful Appeal For Help

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—A 23-year-old field secretary for the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) in Mississippi made a tearful appeal Saturday for more help, saying "19 of our people have been killed or are missing" in the past two years.

Dave Dennis reported on the Mississippi situation to CORE delegates at the 22nd annual national convention.

Fannie Lee Chaney of Meridian, Miss., mother of James Chaney, one of three missing civil rights workers in Mississippi, said "I'm still hoping that he is somewhere—alive."

Dennis, who visibly broke into tears before the 700 delegates, decried inter - organizational bickering and said "People are dying down there — they don't come back."

The appeal brought a standing ovation from the delegates.

A resolution was adopted to build a new community center in Meridian, Miss., as a memorial to the three missing civil rights workers.

Hattiesburg Boy Sought In Death Of Stepmother

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP)—Philip Oliver, 17, was sought Saturday for questioning in connection with the slaying of his stepmother, Mrs. Lorene Oliver, 37.

The beaten and burned body of Mrs. Oliver was found Friday on the 40-acre farm she and her husband, H. E. Oliver, owned in neighboring Lamar County, about 10 miles southwest of Hattiesburg. The body was in a ravine about 50 yards from a cottage on the farm. A pickup truck was missing from the farm.

A pathologist, who examined the body at the scene, said Mrs. Oliver died of a skull fracture from the right temple back. He said she was killed before the body was burned. Officers said a heavy monkey wrench found near the body might have been the slaying weapon.

The body had been wrapped in a pup tent and what appeared to be bed clothing, soaked with a liquid fuel, and ignited.

Wyn Tucker Has Birthday Party

Wyn Tucker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Tucker, 1605 West Avenue, whose fourth birthday falls on July 7, celebrated the occasion with a party Saturday.

In addition to 13 children, those attending included Wyn's grandmother, Mrs. Richard Hale and her great grandmother, Mrs. W. C. Hughes, both of Shreveport, and Mrs. P. R. Bogel, maternal grandmother, of Monroe.

Hollywood Hero 'Shallow Sport'

WEST WIND. By Mel Heimer. Trident. $5.95.

His name is Richard Fletcher. He is a well-established movie star. True to the image of his palpitating fans, he is a bedroom athlete. The main question of the book — is he anything more?

Fletcher goes to Rome to make a stupendous epic, and spends much of his time in the arms of his leading lady, Minnie Stevens. Astonishingly, Dickie and Minnie take this affair pretty seriously. If movie people can have emotions, this seems to be the real thing. Or is it?

The complication is that Minnie once had made a mistake by marrying an operator of a fashion model agency, named Malleson, who happened, to be a degenerate. Malleson, a real nasty villain, won't give her a divorce. And Fletcher is pretty stupid about handling this complication.

Even after the picture is finished, Fletcher and Minnie have a hot affair going, back in Hollywood, Las Vegas and New York. Except that Fletcher can't resist casual sex, in any city, and that's the point.

So this seems to be a novel about the shallow life of a male pinup. And it seems to pose the question of how he fails to meet the challenge of Real Love.

There might have been a final resolution of this theme but the author has dodged it by a plot trick near the end. We are left with the vague idea that a competent mime, trapped by his erotic enviroment, might never have escaped from being an artifical man.

It's a long book with a mattress fixation. The writing relies so strongly on dialogue that it resembles a movie script that has too many words. So here is sex, cynical talk and neatly cured Hollywood ham.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Story Hour Held Each Wednesday

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

All of the Libraries of the Ouachita Parish Public Library System were closed yesterday for the Fourth of July Celebration and the Main Library will not be open this afternoon. Everything will operate on the regular schedule tomorrow and we invite you to come in to see us. Children are urged to remember the story hours being held each Wednesday morning at the Main Library, the West Monroe Library and the Anna Meyer Branch Library.

New books continue to arrive. This week we have a fascinating group of nonfiction books for your reading interest. "Green Medicine" by Margaret Kreig is an account of the search for plants which have healing powers. The field of medical botany is an absorbing one and this is a good introduction to the subject. "The Bay of Pigs" by Haynes Johnson is a first hand account of this tragic event, written by the leader of Brigade 2506. Every parent is going to want to see "A Parent's Guide to the New Mathematics" written by Evelyn Sharp. This is a book, which is timely and useful.

A very unusual book is "The Protestant Mystics" edited by Anne Fremantle. This is a subject about which most of us know very little and it will find ready readers. A perfectly beautiful book is "The Medieval Stone Carver in Scotland" written by James S. Richardson. It is a thorough discussion of medieval Scottish sculpture and the book is profusely illustrated. Another book about Scotland is "The Highlands" written by Ian Finlay. The photographs in color are breathtaking and this book is one which will tempt all European travellers to include Scotland in their itinerary.

Travellers in this country will want to see "The Yellowstone National Park" by Hiram M. Chittenden. It will interest those planning a trip to the Park and those who have already been there. A most useful book to students searching for a way to finance their college education is "How To Get Money for College" edited by Benjamin Fine. It contains sources of scholarships of all types.

An addition to the literature collection is "At the Sign of the Lion and Other Essays" taken from the works of Hilaire Belloc. An exciting true story is "The Secret Battalion" written by Michael J. Bird. This is the account of how four hundred and seventy courageous French resistance fighters in the High Savoy took on ten thousand German and Vichy soldiers in March of 1944. This is the first time this story has been told and it is one of the most heroic and heartrending adventures of World War II.

"Ideas and Men" by Crane Brinton is the story of Western thought. This is a most significant book and will be read and enjoyed only by serious readers. They will find it well worth the time that it takes to read this book. Dr. Brinton is a reasoning humanist from whom the wholeness of fact (and the balancing of opposing sources to establish such fact) is a necessity; he is supremely able to make temperate judgments on the knottiest and the most partisan historical distinctions.

The Library never has enough books about the beautiful homes of Natchez and we are always happy when a new one appears. The latest one is called "Natchez Antebellum Homes". It was compiled by Mrs. Raymond Tyree and was published in Natchez by the Tom L. Ketchings company. It contains a short sketch and a picture of 65 of the Natchez homes and churches of ante-bellum vintage. The print is nice and the illustrations are good, although they lose much by appearing in black and white instead of color. The latest volumes in a series published by the Greystone Press deal with Italy, the Vatican, Malta and San Marino. They are beautiful and useful books.

Many Words About Many Odd Things

THE OYSTERS OF LOCMARIAQUER. By Eleanor Clark. Pantheon. $4.95.

A whole book about oysters? Well, not exactly. A travel book? Not exactly that, either. It's an odd combination of many things.

In a very small place on the Gulf of Morbihan, in northwest France, there long has been a small industry for the growing of seed oysters. Most of the baby oysters are shipped to other localities to be grown, for the gourmet market.

Miss Clark's book is constructed around this unusual endeavor, and she discourses mightily on marine biology, the history of oyster culture and many related topics.

But she also presents many aspects of the place and its people, their social customs, their daily life. There are vignettes of individuals, an amusing narrative about her attempts to get a book from a small provincial library, and a great deal of local color — from flowers and animals to the sea itself. In this respect, her account resembles a travel book.

The real sauce for this serving of oysters, however, consists of a lot of inserted passages on esoteric subjects, of the sort which appeal to the literary set, as in her "Rome and a Villa" a dozen years ago.

React To An Emergency Good, Bad

TRIAL AT MONOMOY. By John Masters. Harper. $4.95.

Take a small peninsular village in Massachusetts.

First, peer into the lives of many of its citizens — the politicans; an avaricious real estate developer who wants to take over a large tract, and the crisp-minded school - teacher who leads a campaign to convert it into parkland; the wealthy dowager whose family once had owned the tract; her offbeat son and his dark-skinned fiancee; the petty officer in charge of the Coast Guard station; some of the town delinquents and a wayward girl, among others.

Then bring in the century's worst blizzard, creating a desperate fight for warmth and survival, amid the constantly mounting threat that the sea will inundate the whole village.

Masters' point in creating this emergency is to show in detail what happens to his characters under extreme stress.

Of course, some of the good people stay good, and some of the bad ones run true to form. But there are others, both good and bad, who react unexpectedly in the crosscurrents of fear, greed, jealousy and self-interest. Sometimes it seems as though Masters works out these patterns a bit to tidily.

The plot is melodramatic, much of the action taking place in a hotel which the town fathers had requisitioned as a common shelter, and in the Coast Guard station. But there also is a sea rescue — adding a Spanish captain and his crew to the refugees in the hotel — a fight among rival oystermen and a looting episode.

The author is known best for his novels about India. This is his first book with an American locale, and it makes use of some of the customary Yankee flavor.

Readers looking for action will find it here.

Court's Majesty Is 'Dramatized'

GIDEON'S TRUMPET. By Anthony Lewis. Random. $4.95.

It is no small task to give the touch of humanity to the abstract processes of the law; to show how an unusual legal case crystallizes a change of trends in the mainstream of American judicial thought.

But Lewis, writing in layman's language, has accomplished these tasks, and more, in his careful study of an important decision of the U.S. Supreme Court last year.

Clarence Earl Gideon, with four previous convictions for felonies, was convicted on a charge of breaking into a poolroom in a small Florida city in 1961. He could not afford a lawyer, and the local judge had denied his request to have one appointed by the court. From his jail cell, he pencilled a crude petition to the Supreme Court.

That touched on the whole state, federal and constitutional question of "right to counsel" as a guarantee of the Bill of Rights. As the author painstakingly explains, the time was ripe for the Court to reexamine one of its own decisions in 1942, which had limited this right, for considerations of federalism and states rights.

The outcome was that the Court appointed a famous Washington lawyer, Abe Fortas, to argue Gideon's appeal — and the whole question. The Court upset the 1942 decision, Gideon won a new trial and was acquitted. But more importantly, this was a landmark case.

Lewis explores all the ramifications and subleties of Supreme Court functions and operations. It takes an earnest reader to follow all the rules and theories he cites, even though his exposition is a model of direct simplicity.

But the earnest reader will find Lewis has succeeded remarkably well in illuminating all the human aspects of his story, and in dramatizing cleanly and objectively what may seem to many of us to be the cold, remote majesty of the law. This is topnotch reporting of progress in the law, in its concern for human rights.

Clyde Johnson's Speech Stopped By Bomb Scare

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — A false bomb report Friday night scattered a crowd that gathered at the First Pentecostal Church of Jesus Christ to hear an unsuccessful candidate for governor of Louisiana.

Clyde Johnson spoke on segregation, communism and national politics.

Before the talk, however, firemen cleared the building and made a thorough search.

Rev. A. O. Holmes, the pastor, led his flock across the street, climbed up on the bed of a pickup truck and led religious songs while firemen were checking the church.

Khrushchev Heads Home In Wake Of Polite Talks

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norwegians who gave Premier Khruschhev a correct but lukewarm welcome five days ago said goodby to him in the same manner Saturday—the end of a 10-day Scandinavian tour that never generated much enthusiasm for him.

Soviet officials said Khrushchev, who is cruising home on the Soviet liner Bashkiria, would be back in Moscow by Monday night. He started the tour in Denmark and visited Sweden before coming to norway.

Those who took part in the heavy security guard for the Soviet leader here breathed a sigh of relief: There had been threats against Khrushchev's life before he arrived.

The visit was without a hitch, but it left officials wondering what had been the real intentions behind it.

"He didn't achieve anything, publicly or behind the scenes," one official said. "His reception has been correct—as it should be for an official guest. But nothing more."

Prime Minister Einar Gerhardsen seemed to bear out this statement in his farewell speech before Khrushchev's departure.

"We have been speaking openly to each other," he said. "In many important political questions we have the same views. In other important political questions we disagree. We have discussed them with the wish to understand each other better."

In Moscow, Pravda said the Western press had distorted the nature of Khrushchev's Scandinavian tour. In a dispatch from Oslo, the Communist party newspaper said Western newsmen followed two lines:

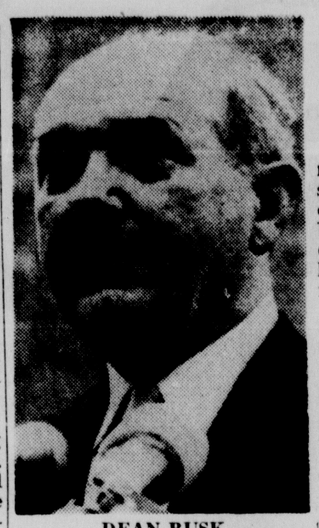
—One "sees plots everywhere and seeks ulterior motives behind every move."

—The other says the visit was mere "diplomatic courtesy and protocol" removed from the common man.

Khrushchev had been on his most charming, best behavior throughout the five-day stay in Norway. On one occasion he urged Norway to leave the North Atlantic Alliance and go neutral—a statement which one newspaper termed "tactless," but which both Gerhardsen and Foreign Minister Halvard Lange said was "expected."

Looking back at Khrushchev's five days in Denmark, when he stepped on Danish toes by belittling their agriculture; and at the Swedish visit, when relations with the host government became strained over the question of a Swedish diplomat missing behind the Iron Curtain, one Norwegian official said:

"The whole trip must have been a complete waste of time for him."



DEAN RUSK
. . . How To Stop Reds

LBJ SUBSCRIBES

BELFRY, Ky. (AP) —Ten-year-old Terry Keesee's newspaper is small by most standards — a two-page weekly, circulation 150.

Its list of subscribers is impressive, though, for among them is President Johnson.

Terry's father managed to get press credentials to enable the boy to meet the President when he visited in Eastern Kentucky. Later, the President's office wrote and requested a subscription.

Rusk Says U.S. Must Stop Home Evils

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk, standing in historic Independence Square, said today the United States must stamp out discrimination and poverty at home if it is to repel Communist aggression abroad.

Rusk, speaking at a Fourth of July observance abbreviated because of threatening weather, stressed the urgency of improving and strengthening life in America. He deleted some comments on foreign policy from his prepared text to avoid a threatened thundershower.

"While we help others to move ahead economically and socially andto achieve political stability and freedom," he said, "we must keep everlastingly at the task of improving our own society.

"A nation with our pledges to ourselves and to mankind can not tolerate discrimination based on religion, race or color.

"A nation with our productive capacity cannot tolerate slums, whether rural or urban. And we must begin to attack our pockets of poverty in a more systematic way."

Rusk, standing under a hot, humid sky lit occasionally by lightning flashes, spoke in front of the famed red brick colonial statehouse where 188 years ago in 1776 the 13 colonies formally proclaimed their liberty in the Declaration of Independence.

Addressing a perspring crowd of 6,000 as the flags of the 50 states fluttered in the hot breeze, Rusk alluded to the never-ending United States effort to remain free by emphasizing that American foreign policy today continues to move along to "secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

"Whatever improves our national life also strengthens freedom in the world struggle in which we are engaged," he said.

"We are the trustees, the leaders, of the cause of freedom. Our enemies rejoice in blemishes. The friends of freedom, who are a great majority of mankind, expect us to set a splendid example."

"The most powerful opponents of the basic ideas (contained in the Declaration of Independence) are the leaders of the principal Communist states, but even the Communists recognize the appeal of such words as freedom and democracy," Rusk told his audience.

Mayor James H. J. Tate discarded his speech entirely when thunder roared over the area which is now a national park in the heart of Philadelphia.

Miss Liberty Belle, Bernadette M. Hkilty, 23, an American history teacher, narrated "The Parade of Flags" as Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts carried in state emblems.

display of majorette magic with two batons.

She caught batons, behind her back, over her head, and, reaching between her legs, caught the twisting stick as it descended behind her. Her act fascinated the crowd and she had to take several bows.

An eye-catching figure aided her victory. She's five foot, seven inches tall, weighs 115, has brown hair, brown eyes, a fair complexion and measures 35-22-35.

The five finalists were asked one question each to aid the judges in making their final choice.

Miss Martin's question sought to find what she would do with her scholarship money should be awarded the title.

She replied that she would "further her education so that I could help all the wonderful boys and girls in the nation." She mentioned that her teachers have aided her tremendously in her bid for fame.

The beauty pageant attracted a bevy of beauties to the Twin Cities. Included among them were Donna Axum, Miss America, of El Dorado, Ark., Miss Mississippi, Miss Georgia, Miss Louisiana, Miss Texas, Miss Louisiana of 1962, Lyndra Pate of Shreveport, and several others.

Going with the title of Miss Louisiana, is thousands of dollars in awards, a trip to the Miss America pageant in Atlantic City, N. J. this fall, and numerous other tours and engagements.

A total of 33 girls from all over the state had entered the beauty pageant. The judges narrowed them down to 10 at the beginning of Saturday night's performance, then to five, and finally to a thrilled Miss Martin.

The emcee for the pageant was Bob Evans of Little Rock, Ark.

Among those appearing on stage was Mayor W. L. Howard of Monroe, who promised that after next year, Monroe would have a new municipal auditorium, air conditioned, and seating 7,200 persons in which to view the pageant.

A telegram from Gov. John McKeithen was read. Howard said that Gov. McKeithen was unable to attend due to a recent bout with the mumps.

Among those making presentations to the beauties on state were Williby Thomas, David Masur, Mrs. W. L. Howard, and Guy Jones.

Bourbon Street Refuses Those Who Can't Pay

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —The only discrimination on most of Bourbon Street Saturday night was against the man who lacked the price of a drink.

Most of the jazz and strip clubs were expected to go along with the civil rights act, and since many of the entertainers came from outside of Louisiana, the clubs fell under the new law.

Although many club or restaurant owners either had no comment or could not be reached, their employes talked freely about the new days ahead.

Most felt integration would mean increased rather than decreased business.

"I think the sentiments of most of the legitimate club owners on Bourbon Street are 'Why fight it?'," said a barmaid at the Gunga Den, one of the best known strip clubs along the famed street.

"If any come in, we have to serve them," said a waitress at the Paddock Restaurant. "The boss says there's a penalty if we don't."

A bartender at another club said he expected little if any trouble.

"I serve people all day long," he said. "If Negroes started to come in, I'd serve them the same as anyone else. We're not covered by the (civil rights) bill since we don't have out-of-state entertainers here. We're just a lounge. I talk to 20 or 30 people a day in my business. The ones I've talked to said they wouldn't mind drinking at an integrated bar."

Bourbon Street has a kind of built-in segregation at some of the hotter spots. A short beer in a strip club will cost anywhere from $1.50 to $2.75.

Tourists walk the brightly lit street and can see some of the show for nothing. During Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's highly publicized drive to clean up the bawdy strip, owners were ordered to keep their doors open.

Many of the peel parlors are going legitimate now under pressure from Garrison's continuing padlock drive. The big talent would come from the East and West Coasts, from Chicago and other big cities outside Louisiana.

The city attorney this week said his interpretation of the civil rights act was any entertainment spot featuring "out of state" performers, would have to comply with the act.

Negro jazz bands at places like Preservation Hall and the Paddock Lounge have been mainstays of the world - famed street for years.

Plane Missing While Searching For Lost Vessel

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI) — A twin-engine Coast Guard plane with five men aboard was missing Saturday and a widespread Pacific Ocean search was underway off the Alaska and British Columbia coasts.

Coast Guard headquarters here reported that the plane, an amphibious Albatross station near Ketchikan, disappeared Friday night after participating in the search for a missing fishing vessel. The plane radioed at 2 a.m. EDT that it was securing its search effort for the night and returning to Annette. At that time it was about 20 miles southwest of Annette.

The Coast Guard identified those aboard the plane as Lt. Joseph N. Andressy, Port Angeles, Wash., the pilot; Lt. (jg) Robert Anthony Perchard, Rochester, N. Y., the co-pilot; and three crewmen, Harry Olson, Annette Island; Donald Craig Malena, Annette Island, and Edward Krjniak, Parma Heights, Ohio. All were stationed at Annette.

The Albatross had been searching for the fishing vessel Jean which had radioed that it was in trouble. Some time after the plane concluded its search effort, the two-man crew of the Jean was picked up by the fishing vessel Argo.

CRUISING Down The River

THE CLYDE ALBRITTON family names cruising down the river as the favorite way to spend a summer afternoon. Here the family enjoys the late afternoon breezes and scenic tranquility of the Ouachita River just above Monroe. (Staff photo by Ben Bradford)

Comfort, convenience, and leisurely living are the elements which attract many local and area families to the increasingly popular pastime of houseboating on the Ouachita River, where craft range from very simple types to some in the luxury class.

By FRANCES PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

In the past decade, boating has shot up to first place as the favorite outdoor recreation activity of persons living within the territory of the Ouachita River.

Speedboats and runabouts, used primarily by teenagers and younger adults, probably have the largest representation on the river, but families wishing to stay together on their outings have turned to houseboats.

While the smaller faster craft fill the bill perfectly for boat riding and skiing, houseboats allow the entire family, especially those with smaller children, to make use of the river.

These houseboats, ranging in sizes and types from the smallest home-made shelter on a raft driven by a tiny outboard motor to the most elaborately - equipped floating home powered by huge diesel engines, dot the length of the Ouachita River.

MANY STYLES

In fact there are almost every style imaginable. The latest fad has been a canopy-covered raft, surrounded by a guard rail, with an outboard motor at the rear of the craft and controls in the front.

Many boating enthusiasts, however, prefer to design their own crafts to provide for the exact facilities they want to have. Some obtain professional help with the actual construction work, while others spend their spare time for a period of several months building their houseboats.

Among the outstanding houseboats on the river is the ultra-luxury "Playhouse" owned by G. L. "Skeeter" Morgan. The 60-foot green and white craft was built here in 1959, with Morgan doing the design and engineering himself.

Special features of the boat include a fully built-in electric kitchen, central heating and air conditioning, all modern furniture, complete diesel power, upper and lower controls and its own 800-gallon hot and cold water supply.

PARTIES, OUTINGS

Although the Morgans very rarely take trips of any length on the "Playhouse," it is frequently used for gatherings and other short outings. The boat can accommodate 50 persons.

Describing the boat, Horace Smith, a close family friend who pilots the craft, said, "the Playhouse isn't at all typical of the majority of local houseboats."

All facilities on the boat are designed for the maximum comfort and convenience. Innovations which did not prove practical were either eliminated or modified to become workable.

Four water-tight compartments are built into the all steel hull, making the boat virtually unsinkable. The "Playhouse" has three diesel engines, with two 120-horsepower units for propulsion, and a 1200-gallon fuel capacity. Top speed for the houseboat is about 15 m.p.h.

The special hydraulic power steering system was designed because of the large size of the craft. Rather than having a leverage problem when steering, the pilot merely turns the wheel as far as is necessary, holds it until the boat turns to the desired angle, then releases it.

CONTROL UNITS

Complete controls for the craft are located on both the main and upper decks so that the boat can be piloted from either location.

The top deck, shaded by a green-and-white-striped canopy, has a large storage chest for deck chairs and other needed items so that the crew won't have to transfer them back and forth between decks.

Contemporary furnishings in tones of brown, orange and turquoise decorated the stateroom of the "Playhouse." This area, which has facilities where 10 persons may sleep, features two large couches with coffee and end tables, accented by colorful pillows.

Adjoining the stateroom is the kitchen and dining area, with a small hallway leading to the rear deck, and a winding steel stairway going topside.

Included in the living section of the craft is a stereophonic record player, complete with tape recorder.

Unique features of the Morgan boat are power windows and a folding front rail. The front windows around the control area operate automatically, with switches to raise and lower them. Around the bow of the houseboat, the railing is constructed so that it can be folded back to allow a jeep to be parked on the front deck.

MORE TYPICAL

More typical of the local vessels, however, is the 40-foot craft of Clyde Albritton of West Monroe, a beauty in itself.

Albritton also designed his own boat and, with the exception of the steel hull, built it himself, aided by his two sons, Clyde Jr. and Bobby.

His family considers boating their number one form of recreation, Albritton said, and spends the majority of their weekends and many weekday afternoons on the river.

Many friends and business acquaintances are treated to outings on the house boat, Albritton said, in addition to his family. It takes a special trip to take care of the grandchildren, since Clyde Jr. has three children, Bobby has two, and his daughter, Mrs. Bonnie Jean Passman, also has three.

The boat has sleeping accomodations for eight persons, Albritton said, and he and his family frequently take overnight trips. "We have to split them up, though," he joked. "We can't take all those kids at one time."

GASOLINE POWERED

The boat is powered by a 125-horsepower gasoline inboard engine. The refrigerator, stove and heating system are run on butane and the boat has its own fresh water supply.

The cabin of the houseboat, measuring 26 by 11 feet, is fully paneled. Above this portion of the boat is the top deck, which is rated very popular for sunbathing and all-over views of the river on cruises.

The cabin is furnished with orange couches which convert into beds and features a special curtain to keep the lights out of the pilot's vision on night runs. The control area is completely cut off by this screen so that the driver has a clear view of the water ahead.

Part of the indoor entertainment is made possible by a converter which changes the electricity from DC to AC to run the stereo and television sets.

Albritton also has a built-in radio set in the pilot's area. He said the set came from an old car and was transferred to his boat.

JOINT OWNERSHIP

Since owning and operating a houseboat can prove both expensive and time-consuming, many families acquire a boat jointly with one or two of their friends.

Many of the medium-sized houseboats found on the river are owned by two or three families. This system not only lessens the responsibility for each owner, but provides greater companionship among the families.

Houseboat owners say that their vessels give them the opportunity and means for outdoor travelling and living, while still offering all the conveniences of home.

Although it started out as a strictly summer activity, houseboating has branched out to include a wider time range. Most boaters have equipped their craft so that they are able to enjoy the sport all year round.

THE "PLAYHOUSE," designed and owned by G. L. "Skeeter" Morgan of Monroe, is a working example of what can be done on a houseboat. Although the craft is built for ultimate comfort and convenience, every feature has been tested and proven to be practical and useful. Shown are Charles Salisbury, 11, a cousin of the Morgans, on the upper deck; and left to right, Scooter Morgan, Skeeter Morgan, Horace Smith, Mrs. Janet Morgan, Layne Morgan, Craig Morgan and Mrs. Louise Morgan. (Staff photo by John Fogleman)

Freedom And Abdication

When King Edward VIII of England, on December 10, 1936, formally abdicated his throne "for the woman I love" it easily made the biggest story of the year and one of the biggest human interest stories of all time. Now, in the United States, an abdication of far greater portent is taking place and another of equal danger seems to be in the making but people have been so lulled or brainwashed that few of them seem to know what is going on.

Congress may not admit it but it has abdicated the law-making right which exists only within its own halls to the Supreme Court of the United States. When the Supreme Court can declare to be law something that is in direct violation of the clear language of the Constitution not only has Congress been shorn of the right which belongs to it but the people and the states have been stripped of the rights guaranteed to them by the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. A number of actions of the Supreme Court have been clearly and openly in contradiction to the expressed intent of the Constitution.

If we place the Supreme Court above the Constitution, we place it above the Congress and remove the functional necessity of Congress. Congress, by asserting itself, has the power to hold the Supreme Court in its place. By failing to do so, it is abdicating as surely as did King Edward VIII when he announced on worldwide news hookups that he was stepping down from the throne.

The so-called "civil rights" bill which has passed both houses of Congress and has become law is a clear violation of the Constitution because it deprives states and individuals of the rights guaranteed to them.

Now, to our sorrow, we find not only that the Congress is submitting to the combined and apparently collusive domination of the Supreme Court and the executive branch of government but that some sections of the press have been brainwashed and in one instance, at least, a code designed to withhold considerable portions of the news from the public has been adopted.

All kinds of schemes are devised as reasons the press should withhold some facts from the public and the amount that is proposed for withholding is constantly increased.

In criminal trials in court it has never been shown that any person was deprived of his rights or was unjustly convicted and sentenced because of information published prior to trials, yet there is constant agitation for withholding facts from the public and at least one segment of the press has devised a "code" calculated to carry out this design.

What appears to be the most glaring instance of brainwashing now at hand is a pamphlet called a "Guide for the Bar and News Medie," a code written by a committee of Massachusetts newspapermen and lawyers, which has been adopted by 26 daily and 31 weekly newspapers in Massachusetts.

If the state of Mississippi is known for its efforts to resist federal encroachment, the state of Massachusetts should be equally notorious for having the first association of newspapers with a code drawn up in the interest of suppressing news. Perhaps it is only natural that Massachusetts should be the first state in which a code for the suppression of news is adopted by newspapers.

The "guide" sets forth as its purported objective an attempt to reconcile the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press with the constitutional right to a free and impartial trial. How can there be freedom of the press when there is an agreement against printing the facts. There is no more freedom there than there is free enterprise under price-fixing.

The code says newspapers and broadcasters should avoid mention of the criminal record or discreditable acts of the accused after an indictment has been returned or during the trial unless such matters are made part of the evidence in court. This is really letting those with long criminal records drink the milk of human kindness. It directly contravenes the theory of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who is in favor of full publicity for hardened criminals even though they are still juvenile toughs.

Finger-print records are one of the greatest weapons in controlling crime. These records show how many times a criminal has been arrested, tried and convicted. They show whether a person may be entitled to some consideration for leniency or whether he deserves to have the "book thrown at him."

Surely the public has a right to know when a person with a criminal record has been charged with still another offense. If no words of his misdeeds were ever whispered, or proclaimed in the newspapers, what criminal would not feel safer in attempting new perpetrations.

The code also asks that the news media avoid publication of confessions. Why all this desire to keep private the misdeeds of criminals?

All such restrictions on pre-trial and trial news tend to establish star chamber procedures in court and hide from the public the workings of the judicial machinery under which all must live.

Right now the pretense is that such secrecy is in the interest of the criminal, although why he should receive such protection is a mystery. In reality, however, limiting or excluding the press from proper trial coverage becomes a great danger for every defendant. Once the press was prohibited from disclosing the facts or acted only under license from the state, secret trials would become a fact and another guarantee of the United States Constitution — that of public trial — would go out the window.

The situation was well summed up by the democratic-minded Massachusetts attorney general when he opposed enactment of a bill in the state legislature which would have brought court reporting under state control — another direct and open violation of the Constitution.

He said:

"The determination of what to print requires the exercise of very subtle judgment in balancing the public's right to know and the defendant's right for an open hearing against the defendant's rights to be tried in an atmosphere free from preconceptions. The best person to make these judgments is the editor. It is he who lives with the problem every day of his professional life."

Blowing In Breath

Northeast Louisiana is a mecca for swimming, boating and fishing. Blessed with rivers, bayous and streams and with many beautiful artificial swimming pools, the area abounds in water sports. For this reason, there is always danger that some one will drown or almost drown and knowledge of the best method of artificial respiration is vitally important.

Once water has been removed by rolling and pressure from the lungs of a person who has been submerged, immediate restoration of breathing is necessary. The victim can survive without oxygen to the brain only a few minutes.

Many are familiar with resuscitation methods but many others do not know exactly how to perform the most-approved system. The mouth-to-mouth method is explained in the First Aid Manual of the American Medical Association. It says:

"Put the victim on his back, pull the chin well up, make certain the windpipe is clear. Put your mouth over the victim's mouth, pinch shut his nose and blow hard. Repeat 12 to 15 times a minute. Keep it up until medical help arrives."

'My Project Is Mississippi, Terrible Mississippi'

Views Of Our Readers

Evil Force At Work

There is an evil, un-Godly force directed against me and all Americans today. Those who mastermind this tremendous worldwide conspiracy either add to, or take from history any line, phrase or paragraph which will help make us feel inhibited or ashamed of our glorious heritage.

Many of us now have been affected by this massive propaganda and feel guilty or uneasy when someone talks to us about PATRIOTISM. We have been told, purposely, that patriotism is old-fashioned, that it is nationalistic or just kids' stuff. I ask you, in all honesty, what could we be more proud of and more appreciative of than this freedom which our founding fathers left us? True, we should be ashamed. But, not ashamed of America! We should be ashamed of our lack of pride for, or our lack of interest in, those inherited freedoms which are being taken from us by the One Worlders and the Warren Supreme Court.

If the average American talks of freedom, heritage and patriotism, he often finds himself frustrated and embarrassed because his audience is not receptive. He is often looked upon as a super-patriot . . . because someone down the street said he was. Perhaps someone else besides the average American could get the message across. Maybe the pulpit is the answer. Only last Sunday my minister took his gloves off and began to inform his congregation on the importance of freedom and of the impending dangers our complacency has wrought. He urged that all Americans recognize where they stand, then stand against those who would reduce us to a welfare state. Would but a thousand times a thousand ministers do the same thing this Sunday, and the next and the next, until we are jolted from our apathy. Truly, an informed citizenry will not allow themsleeves to become a subjugated people.

I, for one, refuse to succumb to this brainwashing by the coexisters and the peacemakers at any price. I am proud that God was generous enough to allow me to be born an American. I am old-fashioned enough to stand and be thrilled, when the Star Spangled Banner is played . . . I am modern enough to accept our growth and new flag, while I visualize the original thirteen stars superimposed upon it. This is a trust which I cannot pass over lightly.

We would do well, during this 4th of July, to remember the words of Winston Churchill: "If we do not fight when there is a chance to win . . . we may be called upon to fight when we cannot win."

Police Protection

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

I feel that the people in the United States of America should do everything in their power to protect their police departments. Why am I so concerned about this? Please let me explain why.

First of all, the Civil Rights Bill before Congress looks as if it will eventually pass. If and when it does pass there will be race riots all over the United States. The twelve Southern States below the Mason-Dixon Line will be hit the hardest. These race riots will give our Federal Government a good excuse to do away with our Police Departments and substitute them with Federal Marshals.

A good example of what I am referring to is the incident that occurred at the University of Mississippi not too long ago. The Marshals that were used at Ole Miss were stevedore's taken off of the docks at New York City. These marshals hit the Ole Miss students over the heads with billet clubs and even went as far as to fire tear gas bombs into their faces.

Not too long ago there was an article stating that the National Council of Churches would donate $250,000.00 to the N. A. A. C. P., in order that they (the N. A. A. C. P.) could stir up race riots in the State of Mississippi. It is a terrible thing to realize that even the religious organizations are getting mixed up in this sort of thing.

Our Police Departments are the finest protection we have today. Let's all protect them as they have protected us.

Taking Dog By Ears

SAVIORS OF 1964

"He that passeth by and meddleth with strife belonging not to him — is like one that taketh a dog by the ears." Proverbs—26-17.

Here they come—the meddling Yankees,
Surging Southward to our towns,
Ill-advised, and most unwanted,
Just a group of misled clowns.

Consider now, the pits they're digging,
Think about the stones they throw,
Pits of hate and stones of anger,
'Gainst the South — a vicious blow!
If they'd hearken to the Proverb,
That precedes this simple verse,
Bitter feelings might be lessened,
Bloodhsed — strife — or even worse.
Let them heed the words of warning,
In the light the Bible sheds,
Watch out that those stones and pit holes,
Don't react upon their heads!

That Race Question

Girard, La.

To the Editor:

I know of nothing more important, no time more appropriate than at the present for consideration by the public of the racial situation. All races.

There is no such thing as race equality among races and individuals except as it pertains to justice, and equity, right of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Neither is there superiority of race which in any way would contribute to making one people feel above another, for every race excels in certain traits. God endued all races with special gifts. This is also true of individuals, who according to their respective abilities occupy positions of trust and responsibility. All men are not equal except under the administration of the law, where question of justice is involved. When these facts are recognized there will be less jealousy over the achievements of others. Instead there will be a genuine recognition of what each contributes to the general welfare. God recognized individual racial traits when He selected Abraham, and His seed, choosing them from all the families of the earth for certain tasks assigned them. Isiah 41: 8-10.

As to the racial issue we are confronted with, there is no escape for the white people but to stand steadfast on these principles and all other principles instilled into the hearts of every worthwhile American, and defend unto the end our freedom.

For the south to be invaded by a bunch of hoodlums from New York all other states, can have no other effect but stir the red blood of each of us to defend ourselves and posterity for the founders of this once great nation.

When the President of the United States stoops so low as to invite the trouble he has, in sending the very vilest of criminal agitators south to reform to their notions, of which they are utterly ignorant, of facts, it is time for all American people to vote him out of office and try something else. Anything.

DR. PETER J. STEINCROHN

Finding Another Doctor Is Urged

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: Our regular family doctor died recently. I haven't taken the trouble to find another. I have been having soreness under my right ribs which isn't too painful but I do not feel well at all. In the past four months I have lost about 20 pounds although I haven't been on a diet. It just happens I have no appetite. I'm still losing and my friends say I'm nothing but skin and bones. Will you please tell me what foods to eat? How can I increase my appetite? Do you have a tonic? Mrs. V.

Comment: If I had the most potent tonic in all the world I'd have to withhold it from you, Mrs. V. I couldn't sleep nights wondering if I were just offering a little water to put out a large gasoline blaze.

What I am saying is that you're going about it all wrong. I can only guess what is the trouble. That requires painstaking diagnosis by your own doctor.

INCIDENTALLY, better find one right away. People make a horrendous mistake when they decide never again to seek medical attention because their own beloved physician has died or moved away.

No one is indispensable. I've often told that to patients of my own who have been kind enough to say to me, "Oh, what will we ever do if anything happens to you? We'd never find another doctor like you." (Which is a sentiment every patient should feel about his doctor.)

I reply that life has many surprises. I tell them that years later they will say, "I used to have a wonderful doctor by the name of S., but frankly you're even better." So get yourself some medical attention right away, Mrs. V. Weight loss can be a serious symptom.

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I am 36 years old and would like to know if I am harming my health by drinking coffee all through the day. It perks me up. I like it. My guess is that I average at least 20 cups a day. Is that too much? — Mrs. N.

Comment: There's enough caffeine (30 to 40 grains) in 20 cups to stimulate an elephant. (Veterinarians please note: this is only a guess.) Nevertheless, it is an awful lot of caffeine.

Are you nervous, Mrs. N.? How do you sleep? Do you have palpitation, heart skips? Do you tire easily?

My reason for asking is that you are needlessly whipping yourself. Have you ever seen some sadistic driver whip an exhausted horse? Well, you may be playing the part of horse and driver.

Do you work in an office or shop? If so, much of this caffeine intake would be due to coffee - breaks. A wise employer would buy a bag of coffee and send you on your way. Anyone who drinks 20 cups of coffee a day is far from efficient.

Am I getting it over to you, Mrs. N., that you're losing out on two fronts: healthwise and workwise?

Why not try to cut it down to six cups a day? That should do for any sensible coffee lover.

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I have just found out that I have gallstones. I suffer pain in the stomach almost every day now, and badly. Can I go on without an operation for a while?—Mrs. H.

Comment: I suspect your own doctor has advised surgery and you are a bit scared about the thought of operation. Well, if he has, I agree with him. Daily discomforts are as good a reason for operation as I know. Have the gall bladder out while you are still in good condition. These days it's relatively simple major surgery.

Dr. Steincrohn's leaflet, "How To Manage Arthritis," will be mailed to you on receipt of a stamped, self - addressed envelope and 15 cents in coin for handling. Address your request to Dr. Steincrohn, in care of this newspaper.

Summer Workers Given Tax Break

WHILE THE STEEP unemployment rate among untrained high school dropouts is among our most pressing socio-economic problems today, the fact still is that huge numbers of school students across the nation have found jobs this summer. They are working temporarily for pay — and they are, therefore, up against our income tax laws.

If this is your teenager, he (or she) gets a special tax break this year because of the 1964 tax law — and it is vitally important for him as well as you to know the precise details. Here are the three key points.

First, he can earn up to $900 completely tax-free this summer compared with a tax-free limit of up to $675 until this year.

Second, any taxable income he earns above $899.99 will be taxed at the reduced individual tax rates provided in the law, and in the bottom income brackets the rates are now sufficiently low to make the income tax angle of minor significance to the overwhelming majority of summer jobholders.

Third, as a parent, you can continue to claim your summer jobholder as a dependent and get the usual $600 dependency deduction for him regardless of how much he earns — assuming you meet the customary tests.

NOW HERE IS a breakdown of these three points.

(1) Until 1964, a typical summer jobholder could earn up to only $675 completely tax-free. He was entitled to the $600 personal exemption for himself. He was also entitled to take the 10 per cent standard deduction. Assuming he used the optional tax table to compute his tax, he found he could earn up to $675 without owning any income tax at all.

Under the 1964 tax law, he is entitled as before to the $600 personal exemption for himself. But he is no longer limited to the 10 per cent standard deduction and instead he can take the new minimum standard deduction of $300.

The $600 exemption plus the minimum standard deduction of $300 permits him to earn up to $900 this summer without owing a penny of income tax.

(2) IF HE EARNS more than $899.99, he gets the break of the reduced tax rates. On the first $500 over $899.99, he must pay a rate of only 16 per cent. On the next $500, he must pay a rate of only 16.5 per cent. In contrast, on these same earnings over $674.99 last year, he had to pay a rate of 20 per cent.

In short, your teenager could earn as much as $1,924 and owe, according to the tax table, only $165 in income tax this year.

(3) As a parent, you can claim your summer jobholder as a dependent and get the $600 dependency deduction for him regardless of how much he earns. You can claim him despite the fact he is filing his own return and taking a $600 personal exemption for himself.

You can do so if you meet these conditions:

YOUR SUMMER jobholders must be less than 19 years old, or he must be a fulltime student regardless of his age, and you must furnish more than half his support.

Support is not only the cash you give. It also includes board, clothing, maid service in the home, lodging, education, medical and dental care, recreation, necessities. Support does not include the purchase price of a car you buy for him.

At the heart of this tale is the new $300 minimum standard deduction, and this one change in our tax laws will free approximately 1.5 million persons from owning any tax on this year's income.

Among them well may be your summer jobholder. Now is the time for him and you to get your tax facts straight.

"Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." Colossians 3:2,3

It doesn't make good sense to lose our sense of values in a world that we must all leave. "Lay up for yourselves treasures in Heaven."

"For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness: and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Romans 10:10

Heart felt religion is hard to conceal. "We cannot help but speak the things which we have seen and heard." "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." Isaiah 40:31

Contrary to what we may think, our strength is derived from acceptance rather than activity. "Be still and know that I am God." "Wait, I say, upon the Lord."

THE WORLD IN FOCUS

By Jack Gates

Routine Divisions

WHILE INTRA-PARTY squabbles make good stories during election years, in this country, at least, they are fairly routine matters. The nominating conventions of both major parties afford an atmosphere of contest—at times, conflict—so the nationwide struggle between the Goldwater and so-called "moderate" Republican factions is actually nothing new. In fact, this clash came fully to the surface in 1952, when GOP leader Thomas E. Dewey managed to pull delegate strength from the late Ohio Senator Robert Taft and crank up the bandwagon for General Dwight Eisenhower.

THOUGH KEPT fairly quiet, there is a similar rift in the Democratic Party regarding the vice presidential spot on the ticket. A full day at that party's convention will be set aside as a memorial period for the late President John F. Kennedy with speeches by Mrs. Kennedy and other members of the family. Since President Johnson has not made any definite commitments as to his choice for a running mate, such a setting—charged with emotions and the Kennedy family's technique for stirring them—could force the issue.

As for the presidency itself, some perspective may be gained by looking over the thoughts of a tragic figure who won that contest in 1880, only to lose his life by assassination shortly thereafter:

"MY GOD, what is there in this place that a man should want to get into it?" That was James A. Garfield's view shortly after becoming president. He didn't have to bear the burden long, just 199 days.

He took office March 4, 1881, and 83 years ago, July 2, 1881, was shot in the back by an assassin. He lingered 80 days and died September 19.

The question raised by his long illness-how does a vice president take over from a disabled president and who determines disability?—has never been answered by act of Congress or constitutional amendment.

An attempt to answer it, and change the line of succession to the presidency, is pending in this Congress in the form of a constitutional amendment. Odds are Congress will quit for 1964 without acting.

GARFIELD was so plagued by people wanting government jobs that after two months in office he said: "It will cost me some struggle to keep from despising the office-seeker."

He was shot by a disgruntled office-seeker, Charles J. Guiteau, 39-year-old lawyer and preacher who was 10 years younger than Garfield.

GOP Leadership

DEVELOPMENTS in Illinois during the week saw the more conservative wing of the GOP show its sinews with the late-starting Scranton drive chalking up a zero.

Senator Dirksen

SENATOR EVERETT M. Dirksen, chairman of the 58 - member Illinois delegation, said it conducted a poll showing 48 for Goldwater, eight uncommitted, and two who did not participate in the voting.

Dirksen said three of those who did not commit themselves and the two who abstained had leanings toward Goldwater.

SCRANTON SAID the poll was not a mortal blow to his efforts to block nomination of Goldwater. "The Illinois delegation has been in this condition for a long time."

"I'm very happy," Goldwater said. "Illinois is one of the key states."

Goldwater's show of strength in Illinois added nine votes to the total of 693 which had been credited to him as pledged or favorable in an Associated Press national survey, against 138 for Governor Scranton.

Goldwater and Scranton spent an hour each in closed-door session with the Illinois delegation.

Goldwater said he repeated his stand against the civil rights bill.

"I HOPE to God that civil rights doesn't get into this campaign at all."

Goldwater said once the bill is law "as president I would uphold it." He said he would not seek repeal of the measure if he became president. He said the President would have to enforce the law.

But the Arizona senator has pointed out on several occasions that he would require the law to be enforced equally in all 50 states—not aimed at any one section of the nation in particular.

FORMER AMBASSADOR to South Vietnam, Henry Cabot Lodge, wasted no time after his return to the United States to leap into behind-the-scenes work for Governor William Scranton's nomination.

Early in the week, he indicated after a 45-minute talk with General Eisenhower that he expected the former Republican President to speak his mind on the GOP nomination before the convention opens July 13.

Eisenhower

LATER, THE American Broadcasting Company quoted Eisenhower as saying in a telephone inquiry that Lodge sought to get him to nominate Scranton but he had received no such request from Scranton himself.

"Lodge sought, without success, to get a commitment from Eisenhower to make a public statement in support of Scranton. Such a request was declined by Eisenhower, who explained that it would be inconsistent with his public position, which is not to support any individual before the convention."

"THEN LODGE brought up the possibility of Eisenhower making the Scranton nominating speech. Such a move, Lodge contended, would 'electrify' the convention and would give the Scranton campaign great momentum with the delegates at the convention.

"Lodge told Eisenhower that he was making the proposal on his own, that he had not checked with Scranton and that it was his personal idea.

EISENHOWER declined to comment on the nominating proposal and Lodge left the meeting without getting any assurances one way or the other.

Civil Rights

ONLY THREE hours after the House of Representatives voted its approval of the strongest civil rights bill since the reconstruction laws of the Radical Republicans in the 1870's, President Johnson signed the measure on Thursday.

In a ceremony in the East Room of the White House, the President pledged himself to "faithful execution" of the law and announced immediate steps to insure its enforcement.

This position reflects a different if not conflicting one on Mr. Johnson's part from that of his years in the U. S. Senate. From 1948 until 1957 then even thereafter, the senator from the Lone Star State joined the southern bloc in opposing such measures as the Truman-backed Fair Employment Practices bill and the milder 1957 bill bearing the same name as the one enacted last week.

But perhaps perspective and political consciousness change when the office of the Chief Executive is reached. At any rate, Mr. Johnson's comments this week came from an opposite polarity from his opinions regarding civil rights only a few years ago:

"WE HAVE come now to a kind of testing," Johnson said slowly and solemnly.

"We must not fail.

"Let us close the springs of racial poison. Let us pray for wise and understanding hearts. Let us lay aside irrelevant differences and make our nation whole.

"Let us hasten that day when our unbounded spirit will be free to do the great works ordained for this nation by the just and wise God who is the Father of all."

BUT THE atmosphere among those who wanted a stronger law and those who opposed it altogether was less reassuring than the President's hopeful phrases.

In Kansas City, Missouri, National Director of the Congress of Racial Equality, James Farmer, and the organization's national chairman, Floyd B. McKissick, indicated more demonstrations would be the only way to test the new law:

"WE HAVE a responsibility now to test this bill in every place of public accommodation, North and South," he said in a keynote address Thursday night. "Voluntary integration has not worked in this country, and this state and every state must be prepared to enforce its laws if that voluntary integration is not forthcoming."

An impromptu test came within minutes of its signing, less than a block away from the convention auditorium and shortly before it convened.

ONE OF the CORE delegates, Gene Young, 13, from Jackson, Mississippi, walked into the convention headquarters hotel barbershop and was refused a haircut.

A score of polite but persistent CORE demonstrators almost immediately converged on the basement shop and staged a sit-in until McKissick emerged to announce: "The hotel management is seeking to have the barbers union get every barber who will cut everybody's hair down here tomorrow."

"THE NEXT thing that we are going to do is to be down here tomorrow morning just to be sure," McKissick said.

MEANWHILE, outspoken opponents of the measure continued to make their positions known. Alabama Governor George Wallace said in Montgomery he intended to fight the civil rights law in the courts.

"My position on this bill is well known," Wallace said. I believe the legislation is unconstitutional and if unchallenged will result in the destruction of individual liberty and freedom in this nation . . . it should and will be tested in the courts on constitutional grounds."

IN THE HOUSE of Representatives, Gillis Long from Louisiana's 8th district, called for a national referendum on the measure.

In proposing that Congress provide for such a national vote next November, Long said "the American public should have a right to express its opinion" and the civil rights legislation.

"WITH THE passage of this bill, the problems will have just begun," he said.

"No single piece of legislation in the past 100 years has been as crucial as the civil rights bill . . . for that reason, if no other, the people should have a voice in whether it becomes law."

If a referendum revealed that a majority opposed the bill, "it would be a mandate" to Congress to repeal or modify the act, he said.

Travelers

ATTORNEY GENERAL Robert F. Kennedy and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev had at least one common interest this past week; both were traveling.

Robert Kennedy

The U.S. Attorney General visited Poland and, according to aides, for the first time spoke publicly about who killed his brother in Dallas, Texas, last November 22.

In reply to a question put to him by Hieronym Kubiak, 25, head of the Polish Student Union in Krakow, Robert Kennedy said: "I believe the assassination was done by a man named Oswald who was a misfit in society."

"HE WAS a professed Communist but the Communists — because of his attitude — would have nothing to do with him," Kennedy said. "Ideology in my opinion did not motivate his act. It was the single act of an individual protesting against society."

NOT FAR away in the Scandinavian city of Oslo, Norway, Soviet Premier Khrushchev continued his talks of trade and the shaping of Europe's political future, communist style.

Khrushchev

Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard Lange said the political discussion produced no views on international issues not previously expressed by both sides.

Khrushchev repeated his position that a relaxation of tension must come through the signing of a peace treaty with the two German states and making West Berlin a separate entity.

THE NORWEIGIANS contend the solution lies in the German peoples' right to self-determination.

Unrest

WITH UNREST on the world front still ranging all the way from South Vietnam to the Berlin Wall, we cannot overlook the situation closest to home — the agitation under the banner of "civil rights work" in Mississippi. Most of these so-called "workers" actually are students, or young people just past student age, who have received instruction for the summer's activities in Oxford, Ohio.

The disappearance of three of these, with no traces having turned up at this writing has not effected a more cautious attitude on the part of sponsoring organizaions.

THE CIVIL rights unit of the National Council of Churches said Monday it is tripling the number of minister counselors available to civil rights workers in Mississippi.

At a news conference, spokesmen for the Protestant and orthodox group said there now are 16 minister counselors in Mississippi, and that the number will be increased to 50 next month.

THE COUNCIL also is taking part in a drive to recruit lawyers to go to Mississippi to provide round-the-clock legal service to student civil rights workers.

Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, chairman of the council's commission on religion and race, told the news conference of the disappearance of three student workers in Mississippi:

"EVERY AMERICAN ought to be terribly concerned as I feel this is impossible to be happening in the United States. Every Mississippian ought to be concerned. This is the kind of thing that brought on a civil war 100 years ago. It is as dangerous as that."

Glorious Fourth

ON THE local scene, the initial presentation of the Miss Louisiana beauty pageant highlighted the Independence Day festivities. An estimated 1,600 persons witnessed the opening night's competitions on Thursday at Neville High School auditorium, with subsequent events climaxing on Saturday. Judging from the favorable response to the contest here, we feel the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce has established the event in its new home.

A MEASURE of gravity and levity came over the wires from Britain last week. In a more serious study, Professor John Yudkin says a high sugar intake increases the danger of heart attacks.

Yudkin presented his views in the British Medical Journal Lancet.

"People who take a lot of sugar — for example in their tea or coffee — are far more likely to have a heart attack than those who take little," Yudkin wrote.

HE SAID dietary studies of 70 men revealed that those with arterial diseases including coronary thrombosis had a sugar intake nearly twice as high as those with no history of heart disease.

A FINAL note, on the lighter side, may give further assurance even at this late date to those who sparked the movement for independence from Britain 188 years ago.

It seems there's a town called Loose in England, and somebody wanted to change the name.

The subject came up at a meeting of the Loose Women's Institute, Mary Holding presiding.

"IT APPEARS that there are suggestions that the village should change to a less peculiar name," Mrs. Holding said.

Loose is in Kent and its name is supposed to derive from several streams which lose themselves underground.

The women's institute voted 57-3 to keep Loose.

FIRST ACT TO OPEN

GOP Convention Starts July 13

By ARTHUR EDSON

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The first act of the world's greatest political show opens on Monday, July 13. Republicans, with a mixture of nostalgia and apprehension, meet to pick the man they want for president.

The convention is in the Cow Palace, which accounts for the nostalgia.

Eight years ago Republicans streamed in here, fat, sassy, happy. Dwight D. Eisenhower was in the White House, and the polls showed the Democrats, putting up Adlai E. Stevenson a second time, could do nothing to dislodge him.

It was a shoo-in. And, for the Republicans, it was heavenly. Their only problem was how to create enough excitement to keep the public awake until the finish.

APPREHENSIONS

Now the reverse is true, which accounts for the apprehension.

The polls put President Lyndon B. Johnson far ahead. The most disheartening sight for a Republican these days are those pictures of the President smiling, smiling so you can almost hear the purr of the political cat who has swallowed the canary.

And this isn't all.

For the first time in 12 years, Republicans are badly divided. Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, so far in front he seems unstoppable, has a large group of disgruntled Republicans he must appease.

Will a glorious floor fight erupt?

Will that normally innocuous document, the GOP platform, provoke a squabble?

How far can Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania get with his late hour plan to sidetrack Goldwater?

Curiously, questions like these give Republicans their greatest hope.

Although politicians hate intrasquad fights, nothing interests the public like a first-class open brawl. Nor is there any better way to produce that beloved creature, the underdog who doesn't know he's licked—and hence occasionally wins.

But let's examine some of the people you'll be hearing, seeing and reading about comes convention time.

Appropriately, the first voice you hear will belong to Rep. William E. Miller, calling the convention to order. As GOP national chairman, the New Yorker has been the party's voice for three years, and a strident, nononsense voice it is.

Fifty years old, 5 feet 8, dapper, Miller seems ideal for the role. He looks on Democrats as akin to the common cold, an unpleasantry that had better be eradicated before it leads to something worse.

SPEECH IGNITES

Theoretically, the keynote speech ignites the convention, inspires the faithful, terrorizes the enemy. Alas, in this jaded age it rarely happens. But Gov. Mark Hatfield of Oregon should be able to fill this tough assignment if anyone can.

Young (he will be 42 next week), tall, personable, Hatfield is one of the GOP's bright young stars. By trade he is a college professor, a political scientist who wondered if it would be possible to practice what you teach.

Merely by recognizing, or refusing to recognize, a delegate at the right time, the convention chairman can influence the course of convention history.

Republicans have put their trust in Sen. Thruston Ballard Morton, Miller's predecessor as party chairman, to keep the convention in hand, more or less, during those inevitable seizures of madness.

Morton began politicking early, as a page in the Kentucky Legislature. He has represented Kentucky in the House and Senate for 12 years.

Urbane, 6-foot-2, Morton's roots in Kentucky go back seven generations. His granddaddy once took him to the Derby, and against the old man's advice, the boy bet on Exterminator. It paid $40.40.

THAT SHARP

He isn't always that sharp in his judgments. A year ago, alluding to New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's marriage to a divorcee, Morton said blandly: "I think this thing well could be an asset."

Around to back up Morton's decisions will be Rep. Katharine Delano Price Collier St. George, well known dog and horse lover from Tuxedo Park, N.Y. She has been a congresswoman since 1946, and this will be her third stint as convention parliamentarian.

Years ago Mrs. St. George dropped the Delano from her name because some might think she was related to Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Which she was. He was a cousin.

The candidates come in late because traditionally they must be coy and come late to the convention floor.

MENTIONED

Most of those who have been prominently mentioned will be here: Goldwater, Scranton, Rockefeller, Gov. George Romney of Michigan, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

But all eyes will be on Goldwater. Through disappointments like the New Hampshire and Oregon primaries, Goldwater plodded steadily on, rounding up delegates.

At 55, handsome, well groomed and garmented, Barry Morris Goldwater is a fascinating study in American politics.

He doesn't have that large home state foundation considered essential for a candidate. (Arizona has 16 convention votes to New York's 92).

His stand on issues is more off-center than is considered desirable.

Yet, here's Goldwater, and only a political miracle can stop him from getting the 655 votes he needs for the nomination.

Other prominent names will be heard here, too: Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois and Rep. Charles Halleck of Indiana — "Ev and Charlie" — who lead the Republicans in Senate and House; Thomas E. Dewey, two-time loser in the presidential sweepstakes and, of course, Dwight D. Eisenhower, as popular and enigmatic as ever.

Herbert Hoover, who will be 90 next month, is too infirm to attend this one.

It's Monster Time Again In Scotland

By ANTHONY WHITE

FORT AUGUSTUS, Scotland (AP)—Is the Loch Ness monster in love?

The thing said to inhabit the dark waters of the Loch has been acting strangely lately. Also, it's summer in the highlands.

He's been reported rearing his ugly head and scorching about the loch like a PT boat one day and brooding in silence the next.

IN BLOOM

On the heather hillsides the gorse is in bloom and the pied wagtails and water-ousels are feeding their impatient young.

So, the highland folk say, why shouldn't it be courting time for monsters too?

To almost everyone in Fort Augustus, a village crouching on the southern shore of Loch Ness, the monster is real. He's there. And, many say, there's almost certainly more than one.

"I've seen three," says Alexander Campbell nonchalantly, "All at once."

Campbell has been water bailiff at Loch Ness going on 40 years — and he doesn't look as though he's kidding.

The monster first surfaced into the headlines when someone reported spotting him (or her) 31 years ago.

He (or she) has been rearing ever since — but not, on this trip, for the press.

Scientific expeditions have sought it here and sought it there for several years but have always failed to come up with any proof that what the Scots say is true.

MADE CAMP

Now another expedition has made camp on the shores of the loch to try once again.

It is spending three months here equipped with telescopic movie and still cameras trained constantly on the waters.

"If something does surface," said Ivor Newby, one of the camera crew, "we'll get him good."

"Most sightings have put the thing in these parts," said Newby. "The loch is at its deepest here—about 800 feet."

One camera team is posted high in the tower of a ruined fortress, Urquhart Castle, where more than 600 years ago Robert Bruce, Every Scots boy's hero, watched for the advancing English.

Richard Spence, bartender at the Clansman Inn, was pouring drinks for two customers a few weeks ago when he just happened to turn his head, and—

"There it was, 20 feet of it with a head like a serpent, tearing along like a speedboat. It was magnificent. He was heading for Fort Augustus, about 10 miles down the lake.

"Then a few minutes later I saw him again, coming back in the opposite direction, still going like a train."

Three waitresses at the hotel —Margaret MacKay, Anne Campbell and Jane Fairweather — were taking a stroll in the sun outside the inn.

Dick Spence called to us," said Margaret, "and there it was, out there. The monster. He was wonderful."

THE THING

Alex Campbell could claim to be the World's foremost authority on the thing.

"I've seen it seven or eight times," he says. "The best view I ever got was the very first, in 1938. It was about 30 feet long, with a single humped back, a long neck and head that stuck out about six feet from the water.

"A few years ago I saw three humps in the water, about 50 feet apart, all moving along in line astern—one behind the other. It couldn't have been one monster with three humps. That would have been too big."

Campbell estimates there have been something like 2,000 "fairly reliable" sightings of the monster through the years.

MANY SOURCES

Descriptions from many sources give the monster a variety of shapes, sizes and colors.

It's head is like a swan, a horse, a dragon, a camel. It has one, two, three, four or seven humps. It's brown, it's black, it's gray. It has stripes.

On the shores of Loch Ness, with a commanding view across its brooding waters, stands an old Benedictine abbey.

"Some of us here have seen the monster," says Father Andrew McKillop, one of the monks. "I was brought up here, but I have not seen it yet. But I think it's very likely that there's something out there."

Alex Campbell believes the thing may be related to the extinct plesiosaurus, a long-necked swimming reptile of prehistoric times.

The latest scientific effort to prove the monster story is sponsored by a pro-monster Conservative member of Parliament, David James.

No one has ever taken a really satisfactory picture of the monster.

There have been photographs of unexplained water disturbances, fuzzy pictures of what looks like a dark hump.

But a correctly exposed, fully focused monster in all his glory —never.

TORNADO WAS TOO MUCH

The Day The 'T. K. Green' Went Down

By E. W. PLUMMER
Correspondent

JENA — High water came early in 1900 and ushered in a banner year for the people on Catahoula Lake and Little River above. Loggers busied themselves cutting and assembling great rafts of prime logs to be towed away by steamboats, interim farmers hauled long tiers of pine knots to supply them with fuel and stacked white oak staves by the thousands at the several boat landings. Agents of sawmill companies paid cash for the logs and brokers representing wine dealers in France bought the staves, while the steamboats bought the pine knots.

The "T. K. Green", one of the best-known boats, was a powerful side-wheeler bearing the name of its owner who was also its captain and skipper (pilot). "Captain Tom," as this skipper was generally known by his scores of friends, was as intrepid as he was cautious, as kindly as he was brash, and was as gentle to his friends as he was tempestuous to his enemies. He took great pride in delivering his cargoes on time, yet would tie up on occasions to sip coffee at an old friend's home. All in all, he was a hail - fellow-well-met, and like the redoubtable Brom Bones, was equally ready for a fight or a frolic.

FREIGHT CARGO

On this particular April day, the Green was to deliver a cargo of freight that had been ordered in New Orleans by his friends who patronized Betsy's Bluff landing some few miles up Little River from Catahoula Lake.

Captain Green was in a happy mood as he guided his boat around the graceful bends of French Fork toward the great Catahoula, and for good reason. The water was high and the winds had grown calm. He would encounter no choppy water on this lake.

Catahoula was glassy calm on that sultry April day, its still waters reflecting the blue timber line that marked the lake's western shore miles away. Not a cloud was in sight when the "Green" churned into the lake's vast expanse of open water, yet the "signs" were ominous and foreboding to those who viewed the elements with a trained "weather eye."

The air was close and stuffy. A halo encircled the sun making its light lusterless and ghostly. "Cat's paws" (little, jerky winds) of uncertain direction made little ripples on the water here and there, then quickly died away.

LIVELY SINGING

The "roustabouts", colored deck hands who always took great pride in displaying their qualities of virility and courage in times of danger, observed these signs of impending danger in silence, but their unsmiling faces reflected an inner uneasiness that they could not conceal. It was they who loaded and unloaded the boat's cargoes as their heavy steps kept cadence with time of their folk songs.

On entering the lake, Captain Green steered straight to the point of cypresses and water elms that jut out into the open water and mark the mouth of Little River; and at intervals he sounded the Green's siren to notify the river folk of his coming. Its mighty blasts pierced the still air like a dagger and reverberated back and forth across the lake, gradually dying . . . dying . . . dying.

The steamer's destination by previous appointment was historic Betsy's Bluff landing some three miles up Little River from Catahoula Lake. A consignment of freight from New Orleans was to be delivered there to the skipper's regular clients, and an agent representing wine interests in France who took passage on the T. K. Green had contracted to buy the staves.

Too, the Green would take on a sufficient quantity of pine knots to make the return trip to New Orleans. Thus, the gallant streamer would be loaded to her rated capacity. When the T. K. Green pulled up to Betsy's Bluff, the consignees were already waiting and had their wagons lined up to receive their goods directly from the boat since there was no warehouse in which they could be stored. The men took no time to chat with "Captain Tom" as was their custom, but were restive and showed signs of uneasiness.

HEADED FOR SHELTER

Soon dusky clouds entirely obscured the sun and white, fleecy clouds were racing overhead out of the southwest at what appeared to be little more than treetop high; and from an inky black cloud that hovered low on the horizon came the sound of heavy, rumbling thunder. As soon as the wagons were loaded, their drivers all hied themselves away to home and shelter.

The deck hands were not inclined to chant folk songs on this occasion, but loaded the staves and pine knots aboard in a sort of frenzied haste. The very air was depressing. The afternoon was far spent when the loading was finished, and darkness was coming before its time. Captain Green hastily raised the gangplanks, sounded the warning bell, and signaled the engineer to pull out. The steamer lurched slightly under its heavy load as the engineer reversed his engines, but steadied itself as it gathered speed down the river.

The captain's plans were to re-cross Catahoula Lake before darkness obscured the "Sentinel Cypresses" that mark the entrance to French Fork. He would tie up for the night in that stream and invite his cronies there for a little "auld lang syne" party. He had the ingredients that would make their conversation easy, maybe a little loud at times, and whet their appetites for a sumptuous meal. Anticipation of this party spurred the captain's haste to be off and away.

DETERMINED MAN

As the Green sped down the river her personnel, except the captain became increasingly restive. Black rolling clouds and almost constant bolts of lightning gave all indications that a tornado was eminent. The mate admonished Captain Green of the extreme danger involved in crossing the lake during a windstorm. The steamer as well as its valuable cargo, and even men, might be lost. Why not anchor in the river where all would be safe until the impending storm abated? But the captain was a determined man and would stay by his plans.

When they entered the lake, the winds suddenly ceased blowing, and weird, unnatural calm followed; and the Green steamed for French Fork at full speed.

Following this strange phenomena, the whole elements were shrouded with eerie, unnatural hues of orange, pink, and yellow with tints of pale green. The steamer was a scant half-mile from French Fork, her side-wheels churning like mad.

Then the captain from his vantage point in the pilot house looked toward the southwest and saw the dreaded black funnel of a tornado, and it was headed directly toward him. Thinking quickly, he ordered everyone on board to the upper deck. If the Green sank, this superstructure would remain above the water.

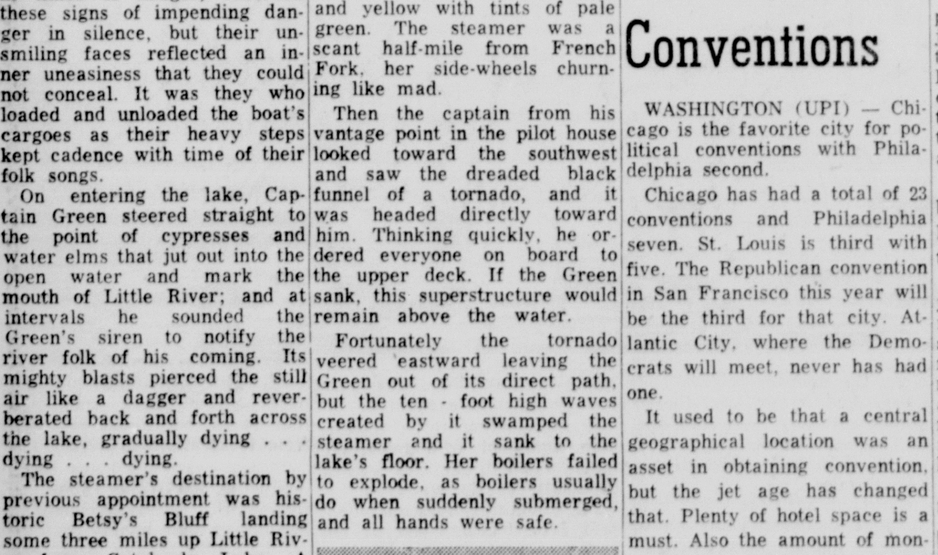
Fortunately the tornado veered eastward leaving the Green out of its direct path, but the ten - foot high waves created by it swamped the steamer and it sank to the lake's floor. Her boilers failed to explode, as boilers usually do when suddenly submerged, and all hands were safe.

CHEERY SUNSET

Within minutes the tornado had passed, the sunset glowed cheerily in the west, the winds grew calm, and soon the stars began to appear, all as if nothing unusual had happened.

A salvage company raised the T. K. Green within a couple of weeks, and "Captain Tom" began operations all over again. But, according to my informer, the intrepid captain acquired much more respect for uncertain, mighty Catahoula and paid due respect to its power thereafter.

THE CAPTAIN WOULD NOT HEED WARNINGS ON THE DANGERS OF A STORMY LAKE CROSSING.



The Tornado Veered Away From The T. K. Green, But High Waves Swamped The Steamer.

LOOKING FOR SOULS

Another 'Hoodlum Priest' In Slums

By JERRY CURRY

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Another "hoodlum priest" walks the slums of St. Louis looking for souls to save among society's rejects.

He is the Rev. Fred L. Zimmerman, a tough-talking 56-year-old Jesuit who runs famed Dismas House, a center for rehabilitating criminals. He took over when the center's founder, the Rev. Charles Dismas Clark, died last summer.

Father Clark, dubbed the "hoodlum priest" by newspapermen, founded Dismas House in the midst of one of the city's worst slum and crime areas. It became a non-sectarian organization to help ex-convicts transcend the barrier from prison to split-level society.

Like his predecessor, Father Zimmerman talks the con's language.

LIKE OTHER SQUARES

"You don't want to be a con," he tells a smooth-talking ex-convict in a pool hall. "You want to be a square. You want to work eight hours a day and have kids and make a living like all the other squares."

Zimmerman's sermons — if they can be called that — generally take place in pool halls, littered slum streets, bars and jails. They're personal and to the point.

"I get in there and rack the balls and play pool with them," he says. "If they're in jail, I go into their cells and talk tough with 'em. If they're in bars or in the streets, I go after 'em."

But Father Zimmerman spends most of his time in Dismas House, an old red brick structure that used to be a school.

"I run a taut ship here," he says. "These ex-cons know who's boss.

"Sometimes, we have had to put certain places off-limits—just like the Army does. Mostly they're hotels, taverns and the like. I tell the men if they're caught in an off-limits place, they might as well come back to the house, pack their things and get out."

The balding Jesuit walks briskly through Dismas House like the school principal he used to be. The men nod greetings.

"We try to get these men jobs. When a man earns some money of his own that he didn't steal, it's bound to be a good feeling," he says. "Then he needs to leave Dismas House and completely divorce himself from his old environment. This makes it easier for him to rehabilitate."

Dismas House usually has from 40 to 60 residents.

'ONLY SECURITY'

"I think supervision and the advice the men ask for is the only way to rehabilitate hoodlums," Father Zimmerman says. "It's just a simple fact: If a man doesn't want to rehabilitate, he won't. The only security some of them have had is when they're in prison."

Parolees and flat-timers—those who have completed their prison sentences—are encouraged to bank their money. As soon as possible, Father Zimmerman urges them to leave and make new friends.

The priest hopes the Dismas House program will be a model for 29 other planned centers in the United States.

"We'll try to find honest jobs for the ex-convicts and derelicts who need our help. With God's help, this movement may help save souls and make good citizens."

Windy City Favored For Conventions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chicago is the favorite city for political conventions with Philadelphia second.

Chicago has had a total of 23 conventions and Philadelphia seven. St. Louis is third with five. The Republican convention in San Francisco this year will be the third for that city. Atlantic City, where the Democrats will meet, never has had one.

It used to be that a central geographical location was an asset in obtaining convention, but the jet age has changed that. Plenty of hotel space is a must. Also the amount of money that a city is willing to put up frequently wins the day.

COMMITTEE ROLE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If a candidate for president or vice president died between nomination and election, the party's national committee is empowered to name a substitute.

It happened in 1912 when James S. Serman, vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket with William Howard Taft, died on Oct. 30. The national committee choose Nicholas Murray Butler.

FIGHT IN PLANE

CAIRO (AP) — A fist-fight among passengers forced a Kuwaiti Airways plane to return to Cairo Airport on Thursday half an hour after it took off for Beirut.

The captain of the Comet, carrying 64 passengers, contacted the airport tower to report a fight had broken out between Kuwaiti and Qatar passengers above Port Said. He said he was unable to control the situation and asked permission to return.

THE MONEY POURS IN

Refugees Still Hopeful

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Bay of Pigs invasion is well into its fourth year of history, and still 100,000 homesick Cubans jam the Miami area — hoping, plotting to overthrow Fidel Castro.

The money pours in for this endeavor from many sources around the world.

For the Bay of Pigs operation the major source of funds as well as the management, equipment and training of the invader forces has been charged to the U.S. government's Central Intelligence Agency.

Reports are widespread that CIA again is contributing money and technical advice, but on a much more modest scale than for the Bay of Pigs. A popularly used figure on the cost of that operation was $40 million.

U.S. officials deny reports of current help.

A study of some of the many refugee groups tells the story of the heartaches of about 250,000 Cuban exiles in the United States; of the enormous task the "action" groups face in ousting a firmly entrenched Communist police state system, and of the weaknesses of their own organizations.

The amount of money they get, the number of members, their potential to harass the Castro regime are secrets or guesswork and, at times, exaggeration.

There has been criticism that some of the groups are fighting a publicity war against Castro while jockeying for leadership of the refugees.

But the money keeps rolling in — from sales of pencils, pens, pamphlets, books, "liberation bonds," "rifle bonds" ($92 buys a rifle), tithing, and gifts from Cubans rich and poor, all over the world. It must run into millions yearly.

Money is raised at ice cream socials, luncheons, lectures, art exhibits, and benefit performances by Cuban artists. There is a heavy flow, too, from private citizens in the United States and Latin America, from labor and political groups and from a few Latin American governments.

What can the exile groups do to overturn the regime in Cuba?

Leaders of three major groups concede the outlook is discouraging but insist that some day a spark might set aflame the pent-up anger of the people and liberate Cuba.

JOB NOT EASY

Manuel Artime of the Revolutionary Recovery Movement, Manuel Ray of the Revolutionary Junta, and Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, head of three combined action groups, admit the job will not be easy.

So far, the exiles agree on two things:

1. They want Cuba freed of communism.

2. The task, despite many signs of growing disenchantment among the Cuban people and the Castro military forces, presents enormous problems.

In addition to the three major action groups, five or six dozen other organizations have announced they will do what they can to help free Cuba. Some plan small raids of their own; others engage in propaganda activities, psychological warfare through pamphlets, letters and radio broadcasts (Miami has three commercial Spanish language radio stations); some keep tabs on economic, fiscal, educational, military, health, prison and other problems of the Castro regime.

All expect that sooner or later they will get massive support from Cubans within Cuba, from the United States, or from Latin-American nations — or a combination of all three.

Ernesto Freyre, respected leader of a five-man war board chosen in a referendum of 40,000 exiles, says "lack of unity has been a big problem, but we can and must overcome it." Yet differences among exiles are so deep that many are skeptical.

Manuel A. Varona, former premier of Cuba, recently announced dissolution of the Cuban Revolutionary Council, the proclaimed sponsor of the Bay of Pigs invasion. It had been in financial distress since its former leader, Jose Miro Cardona, fell out with Washington. Miro claimed the United States had committed itself to a new invasion of Cuba. The late President John F. Kennedy denied it.

U.S. aid to the council was running an estimated $960,000 a year when it was cut off in April 1963. The council had parceled out the funds to other exile groups and to underground agents in Cuba.

Exiles who insist the CIA is currently helping some groups say it is puzzling why the U.S. government might equip some groups with boats, arms and supplies and yet seize similar equipment from other groups in Miami, or on their way to Cuba.

'WORST THING'

Dr. Mario del Canal, who during mornings runs an action group called Rescue and works in a restaurant afternoons and evenings, says "the worst thing that could happen is to stop Cubans who want to fight for the recovery of their homeland from the Communist monsters."

Exiles thought they noted a hint from Washington that raids from other countries would be tolerated. A State Department declaration June 1 said "attacks which may take place from other countries are, of course, beyond the scope of our control."

Some action groups started packing to move to Central America, where small training camps are reported operating.

Just after the Revolutionary Recovery Movement announced in May a raid wrecking a sugar mill at the port of Pilon, in Eastern Cuba, Robert McCloskey, a State Department press officer, was asked if the U.S. government had a hand in the operation.

"I will categorically deny any U.S. involvement in this reported raid," he replied. Did the denial encompass the CIA? Yes, he said, "all agencies of the U.S. government."

Yet among exiles the MRR is the group mentioned most frequently as receiving CIA backing. A dozen or so other organizations whose interests range from military action to school teachers are said to be getting help in one form or another from Washington. None of those asserting CIA backing would be quoted by name.

One exile leader said "there are at least 600 or 700 Cubans on the CIA payroll in the Miami area."

The MRR, exiles contend, actually had CIA men on the second floor of its headquarters passing on recruits for training camps somewhere in the Caribbean.

MRR has its headquarters just off Biscayne Boulevard in a two-story cream stucco house that has seen better days. The living room has an overstuffed sofa and two chairs, all in sad condition, and a desk for a pretty Cuban receptionist.

A dozen or so bronzed young men, apparently in top physical trim, lounged about the room or on a nearby porch. A photographer was instructed not to take their pictures "for obvious reasons." One of the men asked another in Spanish "are the Americans still upstairs?" The other replied they had moved out yesterday.

The MRR is moving to "some place in Central America," said the organization's publicity director, Eddy Suarez Rivas, 29, who spent nearly three years in a Castro prison for underground activity in Havana. "We are not allowed to operate here."

Suarez Rivas, a personable, well - educated man, talked about MRR but explained, "We are under military orders and there are many things I can't talk about."

"I know nothing of any CIA support for MRR," he said, answering a question. As for CIA men being office mates on the second floor: "I don't think I ever met a CIA man."

He said MRR has "more than 5,000 members who pay what they can monthly, from as little as 25 cents to much larger amounts if they can afford it. Latin Americans have been very generous and we get help from some governments there, in the form of training bases, medical supplies, technicians — and some economic aid."

Suarez Rivas said Dr. Artime hopes Cuba can be freed in one to three years. "We count on help of people in Cuba at the right moment and we know it will be forthcoming."

On the opposite side of Miami, in an area called "Little Cuba," are the headquarters of another action group.

CRUCIAL BLOW

It is a combination of three groups, Alpha 66, the Second Front of Escambray and the People's Revolutionary Movement. Its head is Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, whose guerrilla activities in the Escambray Mountains dealt ex-Dictator Fulgencio Batista a crucial blow while Fidel Castro's forces were fighting in eastern Cuba.

Andres Nazario Sargen, 47, a former commander in Castro's army, says the Menoyo group "spends not one cent on salaries for anybody."

"We are as poor as church mice," he said, and the desks, some built of rough lumber, indicate just that. One official had on worn-out shoes, the tops of which were pulled together with string.

"We make no wild promises, but we have the faith and the contributions of 2,500 members outside Cuba, as well as 3,000 members in three provinces of Cuba. We receive no aid from any government.

"We believe with Menoyo that our war program, known as Plan Omega, is an unbeatable formula." Menoyo describes it as "a flame which will sweep Cuba and cannot be extinguished until liberation is achieved." It involves guerrilla action "to produce a state of rebellion and to stimulate the people to rise at the indicated time."

Manuel (Manolo) Ray, leader of the third major action organization, the Revolutionary Junta called JURE, is one of the most colorful men seeking overthrow of Castro, whom he once served as public works minister.

He announced a year ago that he would be fighting in Cuba by May 20, 1964. He wasn't but he did try it last month, and was arrested by British authorities near the Bahamas.

U.S. government agencies are active in Miami. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare operates the Cuban Refugee Center which has registered 172,177 Cuban refugees since January 1961, and has resettled 77,898 throughout the United States. Its current appropriation is $70 million and in preceding years it spent $99 million. It helps 40,000 Cubans in the Miami area with monthly payments of $60 to single persons and $100 to families.

The State Department has a small group here under G. Harvey Summ, expert on Latin-American affairs, keeping an eye on all aspects of the Cuban picture. Summ says he's pretty close to getting ulcers.

The U.S. Information Agency keeps a staff here, culling official Cuban statements to interpret them to Cubans and to Latin America.

MANY TRADES

Exile organizations here are so numerous that the USIA once gave up trying to list them all, finally settled on 80. A few represent only one man with an idea and a typewriter. Others encompass every trade and profession from merchants to veterinarians, former tobacco exporters, fertilizer manufacturers and the Knights of Columbus.

Miami's most popular night club for Cubans is the Violins on Bascayne Boulevard. It's jammed on Saturday night, and often on other nights, too. There are some refugees who can afford it.

A REFERENDUM held among 40,000 Cuban refugees in the Caribbean area and the United States selected a five-man war board. Sighs Of Art Lovers Bolster Famed Painting

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) —Sighs of admiration breathed by art lovers are helping preserve that famous 17th century painting by Rubens, the Adoration of the Magi.

The picture is in the chapel of King's College, Cambridge University.

Experts had qualms about hanging it there for fear the prevailing low humidity might damage a masterpiece painted directly on wood.

Researchers were put to work. Their instruments showed that moisture exhaled by visitors contributed such a boost to the prevailing humidity that it was unlikely dangerously dry conditions would arise.

New Civil Rights Law Wide, Complex; Examples Show How It Could Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new civil rights law is broad and complex and no one knows just how it will work. But there are some typical problems and the means provided for solving them:

VOTING

THE PROBLEM: A citizen who meets a state's voting qualifications is nevertheless denied a chance to register or has his registration rejected because of his or her race.

THE REMEDY: The voter files a complaint with the U.S. attorney general who institutes procedures under the 1957 and 1960 civil rights laws that provide for a retesting of the voter's qualifications by the court, or a court-appointed referee.

The major new provision permits the attorney general to request a three-judge panel to carry out the court procedures and calls for voting cases to be expedited.

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS

THE PROBLEM: A person is refused admission to a hotel, motel, movie or other establishment serving the general public, because of his or her race.

THE REMEDY: Either the attorney general, charging a general pattern or practice of resistance to the law, or the individual, can file a civil action for preventive relief.

If the individual files suit it must first be considered by the newly established Community Relations Service. In states having their own public accommodations laws, the CRS is given 30 days to seek voluntary compliance before court action begins. In states without such laws CRS may have as long as 120 days to get voluntary compliance.

When the attorney general files suit the case moves directly into court and he may request a three-judge panel to consider it. If the court finds the individual was discriminated against because of his color it issues an order that the practice be stopped. Violation of the order would lead to contempt of court action.

PUBLIC FACILITIES

THE PROBLEM: A person is denied entrance to a public golf course, library, swimming pool or other tax-supported facility because of his or her race.

THE REMEDY: The attorney general, after receiving a written, signed complaint, certifying that the signer is unable to initiate court action, institutes a civil suit for relief. If the court finds the complaint justified, it will issue a cease-and-desist order and violation of that order could bring civil contempt action.

SCHOOLS

THE PROBLEM: A child is denied admission to a public school because of his or her race.

THE REMEDY: The attorney general, after receiving a written, signed complaint by the child's parents, certifying that they are unable to bring suit themselves, brings suit for relief. No such suits may be filed, however, in order to achieve racial balance by transporting students from one school or district to another.

FEDERAL PROGRAMS

THE PROBLEM: A school district receiving federal construction and maintenance grants operates segregated schools.

THE REMEDY: The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, having previously established procedures to carry out the title, holds a public hearing. If a finding of discrimination is made, the department is authorized to cut off funds for the school district—or individual schools, if only one school in the district is involved.

Notice of the action must be filed with the appropriate committees in the House and Senate, along with a full, written report of the findings. Thirty days after the filing of the report, the funds may be cut off.

EMPLOYMENT

THE PROBLEM: Anyone, although otherwise qualified, is denied employment or membership in a union because of race.

THE REMEDY: This provision does not become operative for one year. In the meantime, however, a five-member equal employment opportunity commission and regional or state offices may be established.

When the provision goes into effect persons with complaints against employers with more than 100 employes, or unions with more than 100 members, may file their complaints with the commission.

The commission has only investigative powers and must try to settle the matter through conciliation. If it fails, but finds discrimination has been practiced, the individual may go into court and seek relief.

As in the public accommodations section, the attorney general, if he finds a general pattern or practice of violation of the law exists, may go directly to court, by-passing the commission.

Lawyers Urge Nation To Obey New Rights Law

WASHINGTON (AP)—A committee of 200 prominent lawyers called on the nation Saturday to comply with the new civil rights law and urged fellow attorneys to assist in that compliance.

The Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law formed last year by bar leaders at the request of the late President John F. Kennedy, said compliance will ease racial tensions and help bring "a final solution (to) the major domestic crisis of our time."

It concluded: "Only by accepting and discharging this responsibility can we prove to ourselves and to the world that we are a nation of free men who believe in the democratic processes and the rule of law. Any misguided call for defiance of the law is directly contrary to the principles by which we are governed.

"An especially heavy responsibility rests upon lawyers and their professional organizations to interpret the new law to their communities and to their clients, to urge orderly compliance, and to support individual lawyers who take a leading part in these efforts despite the risk of criticism or hostility."

The committee said Saturday's statement will be followed soon by a letter to bar associations offering services of the committee to promote the compliance effort.

Motel In Jackson Allows 1st Negro To Get Service

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — A Negro man in bermuda shorts was served Saturday in one of this city's leading motels.

The Negro walked into the dining room at the Sun-N-Sand Motel in mid-afternoon, sat down, and was served.

There was no disturbance and none of the white patrons left.

A spokesman for the motel said the policy of the establishment was to serve Negroes and rent rooms to them until the new civil rights law should be struck down.

It was the first major test of the civil rights law in this segregation stronghold state.

State NAACP Field Secretary Charles Evers said Mississippi Negroes would more extensively test the effectiveness of the law in the state next week.

Hundreds of sailors, FBI agents and state troopers searched through a little town west of Philadelphia, Miss., for some trace of the three missing civil rights workers. The 13th day of the hunt for the three men ended earlier than usual, and the sailors went back to their base at Meridan.

Lutherans Pass Money To Build Church Needs

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A $45 million program for church expansion was assured here Saturday by delegates to the Lutheran Church in America's (LCA) biennial convention.

The Rev. Dr. Donald L. Houser of Chicago, the board's executive secretary, told the delegates the fund will help the board to enter 215 new fields, organize nearly 200 new congregations and erect 320 new church buildings in the next two years.

Dr. Houser said the money is needed to consolidate existing indebtedness, to purchase parsonages and to buy sites for churches and parsonages, and to further the board's programs in the inner city.

During the past two years, the board has spent $16 million to build 224 churches, to purchase 170 church sites, and to erect 159 parsonages. During this time there were 138 congregations organized and work begun in 140 new areas.

The board reported to the 700 delegates from across the nation that at the present time church property and guarantee loan funds total $60 million.

The board added that 145 congregations received aid in the form of salaries and special program grants.

The board report labeled the urban man as, "ruthless, mobile self-sufficient and pagan." The report went on to state that the problem of the urban man poses new questions and new approaches for the mission of the church in an urban society.

Large city dwellers were cited by the report as a different type of problem.

"In the midst of these," the delegates were told, "the church is confronted with a type of man that hardly (if at all) knows that the church exists and really cares even less."

"The cost of re-entering our cities or even of maintaining our congregations in them will be high," the report warned. "It is also frustrating and an endless pit into which we can throw manpower and resources with the barest results . . . It is the desire of the division to make at least six new city entries in 1964.

Oregon Asks Bar On Mississippi

COOS BAY, Ore. (AP) —The Oregon Democratic Convention Saturday asked the Democratic National Convention to refuse to seat the Mississippi delegation.

A resolution said the Mississippi Democratic party support unpledged electors "who could award the presidential election to a state rights Republican candidate."

The resolution was sponsored by civil rights groups who said seven other state Democratic organizations have adopted similar resolutions. There was one dissenting vote heard in the voice vote by 99 delegates.

John Pennel First In Vault At Olympic Trials Contest

JOHN PENNEL, former Northeast State college pole vaulter, clears 16 feet, six inches to set a new meet record and qualify for the Olympics in the Olympic track and field trials at New York's Randall's Island stadium Saturday. The old record of 15-9¼ was set in 1960 by Don Bragg. (AP Wirephoto)

1,500 Meter Distance Won By Burleson

NEW YORK (AP) — Lean Dyrol Burleson outkicked staunch rival Tom O'Hara in a tactically - run 1,500-meter race Saturday and Hayes Jones bolted to a 13.4 triumph in the high hurdles in key performances on windup day of the Olympic track and field trials.

The next five finishers in each event also qualify for the final trials on Sept. 12-13.

Other final winners Saturday included Jerry Siebert in the 800-meter in 1:47.2, Al Oerter with a 201-11 discus throw, John Pennel with a disappointing 16-6 pole vault, Jeff Fishback at 8:40.4 in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, Henry Carr with a 20.7 in the 200, Ollan Cassell with a 45.9 in the 400 meters, and Ira Davis at 52-10¾ in the triple jump.

Seven of the 17 marks turned in during the two-day meet surpassed the listed Olympic records and another, a 7-1 high jump by John Thomas Friday, equaled the Olympic record.

The marks here bettering Olympic records were Jones' in the hurdles, Ralph Boston's wind-blown 27-5½ broad jump.

Dallas Long's 64-9½ shot put, Trenton Jackson's 10.1 100 meters, Pennel's pole vault, Hal Connolly's 225-4 hammer throw and Oerter's discus.

There were, however, several major disappointments. These included sprinter Bob Hayes, who scratched in the dashes; AAU champion Ed Carruthers, who failed to qualify in the high jump; world record holder Adolph Plummer, who failed to qualify for the finals in the 400 meters; Jim Beatty, who dropped out with two laps to go in the 5,000 meters; veterans Willie Atterbury and Willie May, 1960 silver medalist in the hurdles, who failed to qualify, and the original 16-foot pole vaulter, John Uelses, who missed too.

Hayes, who has a pulled muscle, will get another shot in the trials at Los Angeles, though. Officials announced that decision at the conclusion of the meet.

A. J. FOYT, of Houston, Texas, takes a look at the trophy he won for finishing first in the "Firecracker 400" stock car race at Daytona Beach, Fla., Saturday. Foyt was the winner of the Indianapolis 500 race earlier this year. (AP Wirephoto)

AT DAYTONA BEACH

Foyt Captures Big Firecracker Title

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—Indianapolis 500 champion A. J. Foyt powered a 1964 Dodge to a car's length victory Saturday in the Firecracker 400 to become the first non-NASCAR driver ever to win a major stock car race.

Foyt, of Houston, Tex., and teammate Bobby Isaac, from Catawba, N. C., waged a tremendous stretch battle that kept a roaring crowd of 35,000 on their feet for the last lap.

The dazzling duel between the two Dodge drivers began on the 104th lap of the 160 turns around the 2½ mile oval when front-running Richard Petty of Randleman, N. C., was forced out of the race by a blown engine in his 1964 Plymouth.

Petty, who was ahead by a full half lap at the time of his trouble, drove into the pits, got out of his automobile and kicked up a cloud of dust in disgust.

Foyt's winning time was an average 151.985 miles per hour, a new record, in a race slowed by four caution flags, one run up when Kenneth Spikes of Cordele, Ga., was injured in an accident.

Spikes went into a spin on the fourth turn of the 102nd lap, slammed sideways into an infield retaining wall and suffered a fractured leg, multiple abrasions and possible finger fractures.

Foyt's time was one mile per hour faster than the race set last year when the late Glenn (Fireball) Roberts was the winner.

Roberts, critically burned in a fiery crash in the World 600 at Charlotte on May 24, died Thursday.

Just before Saturday's race got underway, the crowd held a minute of silence in final tribute to Roberts.

The crowd was fairly quiet during the first half of the race but more than made up for it during the battle between Foyt and Isaac.

The lead changed hands five times between the two over the final 56 laps. Foyt went ahead on the back stretch of the last lap and came charging down to the finish line, blocking Isaac's desperate bid to regain the lead.

Foyt is a United States Auto Club (USAC) driver and although he has driven in National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) events prior to Saturday, this was his first victory.

Foyt, who won at Indianapolis on May 30, got $12,100 for his first place finish Saturday. Isaac's picked up $7,195 for second.

Jimmy Pardue of North Wilksboro, N. C., placed third in a 1964 Plymouth and earned $5,230.

DEFEAT GIANTS

Phillies Regain lst On 5-2 Win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Philadelphia Phillies regained the National League lead Saturday, whipping the San Francisco Giants 5-2 when Richie Allen tripled home the tie-breaking run in the 11th inning and West Covington followed with a homer.

The decisive fireworks in support of Jim (Perfect Game) Bunning, who allowed only six hits and pitched scoreless ball after the first inning, shoved the Phillies one-half game in front of the Giants in this showdown series.

The Phillies thus became traditional—and actual — favorites to win the National League pennant. The July 4 leader in the NL has gone on to the league championship 40 times in 63 years.

Bunning, now 9-2, retired 17 of the last 18 batters he faced before Jack Baldschun took over and pitched the 11th. Gaylord Perry, 6-4, who took over for the Giants in the sixth, had extended a scoreless innings' streak to 18 before the Phillies wrapped it up in the 11th.

John Herrnstein started the decisive rally with a leadoff single, and after John Callison fouled out, Allen tripled to right and Covington tagged his homer, also to right.

The key triple was Allen's fifth hit in 10 appearances against the Giants in the first two games of the three-game series. He also has a homer, double and two singles plus three walks.

Allen figured in all three runs Saturday, driving in the first with a double and scoring the second after walking. Duke Snider, veteran outfielder of the Giants, provided the only fireworks for the Giants with a two-run first inning homer.

The Phillies grabbed a one-run lead against Jack Sanford in the first when Callison drew a walk with two out and Allen followed by drilling a double down the right field line.

Snider put the Giants out front in their half of the inning, lashing a homer that just stayed fair down the right field line. It came with Jim Hart, who singled leading off, on base.

Sanford limited the Phillies to only one more hit through five innings but was lifted for a pinch hitter in the Giants' fifth. With Billy Pierce pitching for San Francisco, the Phillies tied it 2-2 in the sixth.

Allen drew a two-out walk, raced around to third on a single by Wes Covington and continued home when Snider's throw from right field went astray.

The word on Sanford from the Giants' bench was that he had a recurrence of arm tiredness, but he was in the on-deck circle until Jose Pagan, the eighth man in the order, singled to start the fifth. Sanford often has been hit hard in late innings after strong starts.

ONE STROKE EDGE

Rodriguez Holds Lead In Whitemarsh Open

WHITEMARSH, Pa. (AP)—Jaunty Juan (Chi Chi) Rodriguez, a bold gambler with the chips down, held his one stroke lead in the $125,000 Whitemarsh Open Golf Tournament Saturday with a three-under-par 69 and a 54 hole total of 203.

Disdaining his usual clowning for serious golf and a $24,000 first prize, Rodriguez canned four birdies and lost the battle with par only once in a 35-34—69 third round.

The Puerto Rican has put together rounds of 66, 68, 69 for his 13-under-par 54 hole total, one stroke ahead of the Dave Marr, veteran Texan playing out of New Rochelle, N.Y.

Marr shot a 69, which with his opening 67 and second round 68 gave him a 204.

Breathing down their necks were Arnold Palmer, playing his third straight sub par round, and Tony Lema, each with 205.

Palmer fired a five-under-par 67, climaxed with a 20-foot chip for an eagle on No. 17. Lema, recovering from a scrambling 74 Friday, also scored a 67.

Rayville Downs Ouachita Bank By 4-2 Margin

Rayville won an error - filled July 4th exhibition game from Ouachita Bank, 4-2, Saturday night at Memorial Stadium in Bernstein Park.

In Amatuer League play today, the All Stars will take on Rivers Ford in a twinbill starting at 2 p.m.

Winning hurler Donnie Adams and Ouachita's Goerge Moore were both outstanding but neither received very solid support afield in the holiday contest. Adams threw a three-hitter at Ouachita but actually was out-shoned by Moore who had a two-hitter. However, Adams' teammates committed "only" four errors behind him while Moore had to watch his mates miscue on nine chances.

Adams struck out 11 men and Moore set down eight on strikes.

Rayville scored two runs in the top of the first when Charlie Gammil walked, Peter Mercer reached base on an error and Charlie Jones singled, plating both runners.

The visitors added another tally in the fourth when James McLemore scored after a third strike got by Ouachita catcher Fred Kennedy and they added another run in the seventh on a couple more Ouachita errors.

Ouachita Bank scored its first run in the initial frame on two errors and a wild pitch and scored again in the fifth when Fred Kennedy singled and came home on Wayne Suttons' double, one of two for the left fielder during the contest.

Falstaff Grabs Amateur Victory From All Stars

First place Falstaff socred a pair of runs in the fifth inning to break a 1-1 tie and take a 3-2 American Amateur League encounter from the All Stars at Legion field here Friday night.

Fallstaff now is 11-1 for the season. The All Stars have a 2-7 standard.

Ouachita National Bank meets Davis Food Center in tonight's encounter.

Essentially the game was a pitcher's duel with Bill Brooks' three - hit performance slightly outshadowing a five - hit job hurled by Aubrey Quimby.

Falstaff took a 1-0 first inning lead when Charley Dykes beat out a bunt, advanced on a walk and double steal, then scored on Ken Saterfield's ground out.

The All Stars tied it 1-1 in the third. Dooley Haddad singled, went to second on Skeeter Ritter's ground ball and scored on Jerry Lindsey's single.

Fallstaff won the game with two runs in the fifth. James Cromwell was safe on an error and scored on Dykes' triple. Dykes came home on Roy Walton's sacrifice fly.

Quimby caught the Stars up to a single run in the sixth, however. He was safe on an error, advanced to third on a pair of ground outs, then scored on an error.

THE SPORTS SCENE

with Keith Prince

Loyal baseball fans will receive payment in full for their everyday heartaches and happiness Tuesday, July 7, when the 35th Major League All-Stars game is played in Shea Stadium, home of the New York Mets.

This annual event is placed along side the World Series as baseball's highest moment of glory. And so it should be.

No matter how many years you have followed baseball or how many All-Star game you've seen, the one upcoming will always carry that "something special" tag. At no other time is there such a gathering of famed baseball players. We tune our TV sets in and on the screen see men talking loosely to each other as their names are called from the loud speaker. It appears to be simply a get-together of business men whose profession is baseball.

But we are hastened back to reality by the thunderous applause which accompanies announcement of each name. And we know that these are not just baseball players; they are the best baseball players in the world.

The thought may or may not have occurred to you, but there is more than a half million dollars wrapped up in salaries among the players of the two clubs.

But it's more than a salary show off time to the players. It is one of the highest honors that a player can receive, it is prestige, it is confidence in his ability to play the game. It is the All-Star game.

All-Star Game History

Since the All-Star classic was originated by Arch Ward, sports editor of The Chicago Tribune, in 1933 it has captured the mid-summer spotlight. Overflowing crowds have been on hand time and again. Only year the game has not been played was in 1945 because of war-time travel restrictions.

Going into Tuesday's contest the American League holds a one game margin (17-16) with one tie in the record books. The tie game was played in 1961 when rain forced the contest to be called after nine innings in Boston with the score at 1-1.

The American League has held the upper hand throughtout the 30 year existance of the game, thanks mostly to the tremendous jump it got off to in the 1930's and 1940's. The Americans won the first three games and went on from there to rack up a 12-4 advantage through 1949.

However, from here the tide swiftly changed and the National League clubs have been on the offensive ever since. Beginning in 1950, the NL team won six of the next seven, including the first four straight. The American League bounced back to win in 1957 and 1958 and again in 1960, but then the bombs fell as the National Leaguers put together another four-game winning streak wrapped around the tie game of 1961.

Always causing keen interest has been the way in which the members of the All-Star teams are chosen.

The first two years the contest was held, 1933-34, the fans were awarded the privilege of selecting the team members. Beginning in 1935, the managers of the eight teams in each league selected the players.

In 1948, the right was given back to the fans and it seemed to be a fair way of choosing the clubs. However, things turned sour in 1957 when Cincinnati fans stuffed the ballot box, placing everyone in the Reds' line-up on the starting NL club except first sacker George Crowe. Commissioner Ford Frick stepped in and replaced two of the starting Reds with Willie Mays and Hank Aaron.

The next year Frick ruled that the players, managers and coaches in each league would pick their own starting line-up. Pitchers and the remainder of the squad were chosen by the All-Star managers. This is the system still being used for the selection of teams. Players are not allowed to vote for anybody on their own club.

Outstanding All-Star Games

It is difficult to choose a few games which are considered more out-standing than the others because all were certainly eye-filling affairs which had their finer moments.

Still, there are some that cannot be overlooked as especially significant in the history of the All-Star event. We would like to refreshen your memory about some of these.

1933 (game 1) — The first "Dream Game" was won by the American League, 4-2, and fittingly on the strength of a two-run homer by Babe Ruth. The Babe was already in his last years of baseball, but, always one for the dramatic, came through in typical style to win the first All-Star contest with his trademark—a home run.

1934 (game 2) — This game will always be remembered as "Hubbell's Game." Although the American League won, 9-7, King Carl accomplished the near impossible when he struck out Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin in succession.

1941 (game 9) — A young fellow in his second major league season made his presence known and appreciated during this game, and throughout the season. Ted Williams stepped to the plate with two men out and one on in the bottom of the ninth and hit a home run to bring the American Leaguers a 7-5 victory. The Thumper went 2-4 during the day and had four RBI's. He went on to hit .406 that year, the last major league player to accomplish the feat.

1946 (game 13) — Ted Williams, period. This was his day completely. The marine returned home and tore Fenway Park apart while he led the AL club to a 12-0 victory. Williams had a perfect 4-4 day, including two home runs, scored four runs and knocked in five. This also marked the second shutout in All-Star history. The first occurred in 1940 when the National League won, 4-0, behind the combined three hit pitching of five hurlers (Paul Derringer, the winner, Bucky Walters, Whit Wyatt, Larry French and Carl Hubbell). The NL won the only other shutout affair, 6-0, in 1960.

1950 (game 17) — In one of the most dramatic of all series clashes, the National League came from behind to tie the game, 3-3, on Ralph Kiner's home run in the ninth inning and then win in the 14th on a four-bagger by Red Shoendienst. It was the first, and longest yet, extra inning All-Star contest.

1954 (game 21) — Bombs away! In the biggest hitting explosion of All-Star history, the American League won, 11-9, while three team offensive records were being set and another record tied. Al Rosen, Cleveland third baseman, set the pace for the day with two home runs and five RBI's. Other AL home run producers were Larry Doby and Ray Boone while Ted Kluszewski and Gus Bell blasted four-baggers for the National League. The sluggers tied the mark of six home runs in a game. The team records set included most runs (20), most hits (31) and most hits by one team (the AL with 17).

1955 (game 22) — Stan Musial got just one hit during this game, but, as usual The Man made it count. With the score tied, 5-5, going into the bottom of the 12th inning Musial unloaded on a Frank Sullivan pitch to give the National its fifth win in the last six games and narrow the margin to 13-9. Willie Mays also had a big hand in the victory, electrifying the crowd with an over-the-fence catch of a Ted Williams drive and chipping in two hits and two runs to the NL cause.

1959 (game 26) — This game was significant in that it marked the first of the twice - a - season All-Star games which continued through 1962. There have been varied opinions given about having two All-Stars games during a year but when all the evidence is in there can be little doubt that it hurt the classic simply because it took something away from it. That little extra touch of glamour seemed absent, the heroics just a little less heroic, and the excitement not quite as exciting. However, Willie Mays did his best to provide that Say-Hey spirit when he lashed a game-winning triple in the eighth inning. Nationals 5, Americans 4.

1960 (game 29) At the home of American League dynasty, Yankee Stadium, the National League administered a 6-0 whitewashing to the AL on the strength of four home runs. Eddie Mathews, Willie Mays, Stan Musial, and Ken Boyer connected off AL pitching as Whitey Ford absorbed his second All-Star loss. Musial's homer was his sixth in All-Star action and broke his own record. The game was the second during 1960 and Mays' 3-4 performance gave him a total of 6-8 during the year's All-Star play.

1962 (game 32) Little Maury Wills stole the thunder from the big boys in the first All-Star tilt of 1962, scoring two runs and going 1-1 at the plate after entering the game as a pinch runner off Stan Musial in the sixth frame after Stan had gotten his 20th All-Star hit, a pinch single.

However, Wills was not alone on the scene for the NL. Willie Mays was at his best, making several great catches and the hurling crew of Don Drysdale, Juan Marichal, Bob Purkey and Bob Shaw held the AL to four hits in a contest played before President John F. Kennedy in the new Washington stadium.

1963 (game 34) — This game brought back the one-a-year All-Star games and also brought Willie Mays crashing into the spotlight again with his all-around play. Mays drove in two runs, scored two more and stole two bases in leading the National Leaguers to a 5-3 victory and cut the American League lead to one game in the series, 17-16. It was also a game of emotion as Stan Musial, playing his 24th consecutive and last All-Star game, received an ovation when he pinch-hit in the fifth inning and flied out to right field.

And now comes 1964. The scene is set, the cameras ready and the cast has been chosen. However, the leading role has not yet been awarded. The suspense will grow as the crowds flock to see the 1964 edition of baseball's "Greatest Show On Earth."

Will it be a pitching duel? Will Willie Mays again steal the show with his daring feats? Will rookie Tony Oliva begin a new reign as All-Star king? Ten doubleplays in one game? A no-hitter? Seven home runs? Could that old villain Rain be lurking in the background, ready to pounce upon beautiful Shea Stadium and the surroundings which are ready to captivate the sports fans of America.

What are the answers? There are no answers — yet. But you will be ready, anxious to see who the goat will be, and the hero. It is baseball at its best. It is the All-Star game.

SWEEP DOUBLEHEADER

Linz Leads Yanks Over Twins, 2-1

NEW YORK (AP)—Phil Linz doubled home one run, then scored the winning run on an error by Zoilo Versalles as the New York Yankees nipped Minnesota 2-1 for a sweep of their doubleheader Saturday. The Yankees won the opener 7-5 on Mickey Mantle's three-run homer in the eighth inning.

Camilo Pascual limited the Yankees to four hits in the nightcap but still suffered his sixth defeat against nine victories.

Clete Boyer singled with one out in the fifth, was sacrificed to second and scored on Linz' double to left field. Linz came home when Versalles let Bobby Richardson's grounder get through him.

Minnesota scored in the third on doubles by Jerry Zimmerman and Versalles.

Al Downing, 4-2, struck out five and walked one. He was touched for nine hits.

Twins' relief pitcher Al Worthington helped set up the Yankees' winning rally in the opener. His third strike to lead-off batter Johnny Blanchard was wild, and the pinch hitter reached first. Linz sacrificed but was safe on Worthington's high throw.

Peters Wins 9th From Cleveland On Three-Hitter

CHICAGO (AP)—Gary Peters stopped Cleveland on three hits, two in the eighth inning, Saturday as the Chicago White Sox beat the Indians 4-0.

Peters outdueled Sam McDowell, who allowed the White Sox only two hits until the eighth when they erupted for three runs and two hits.

Peters brought his record to 9-3, striking out eight and walking four. McDowell struck out 12 but also was extremely wild, walking 11 and hitting a batter before leaving with two out in the eighth.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Rookie Bill McCool snuffed out a St. Louis rally in the ninth inning by striking out the side, preserving Cincinnati's 3-2 victory over the Cardinals Saturday night.

McCool came on after starter Jim O'Toole had been touched for a leadoff double by Ken Boyer. McCool struck out Bill White and Charley James but Boyer scored when Leo Cardenas threw wild on Julian Javier's grounder.

RUINS GRAND SLAM HOPES

Brazil's Maria Bueno Takes Wimbledon Title From Smith

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) Maria Bueno of Brazil, graceful and unpredictable as always, won back the Wimbledon women's tennis crown Saturday with a 6-4, 7-9, 6-3 victory over defending champion Margaret Smith of Australia in a match that wrenched the nerves of the crowd packed around center court.

For Maria it was the happy ending of three years of grim struggle against ill health and what she has described as "personal problems." For Margaret it ended a hope of a grand slam of the world's major titles. She had won the Australian, Italian and French titles this year.

Champion in 1959 and 1960, Miss Bueno contracted hepatitis three years ago and not until she won the United States title, also against Miss Smith, at Forest Hills last year did she get back into the limelight.

The Brazilian girl shut off an Australian try for a title sweep. Aussie ace Roy Emerson won the men's singles championship Friday, beating countryman Fred Stolle.

The Bueno-Smith match, one of the most exciting seen here in years, fell neatly into three parts. There was a dull first set, littered with dropped service games, netted volleys and wild drives out of the court. Then came a tingling second set, with both girls quivering like aspen leaves with nerves and the crowd quivering too.

GRAND SLAMMER

Thomas Sparks Red Sox Victory

BOSTON (AP)—Lee Thomas, batting a feeble .122 with men on base since joining Boston, smashed a grand slam homer in a nine-run first inning and helped the Red Sox crush his former Los Angeles Angels mates 13-5 Saturday.

Boston's opening fireworks produced its biggest inning of the season and ended a four-game losing streak.

Thirteen Sox went to bat against lower Ken McBride—now 2-11—and reliever Don Lee in the assault which also included five singles, three walks and an error.

Right-hander Earl Wilson coasted to his ninth triumph against three defeats.

Joe Adcock, Los Angeles first baseman, dropped a perfect throw for an error on leadoff man Felix Mantilla and Boston was on its way in the first.

After rookie Tony Conigliaro singled, Carl Yastrzemski walked and Dick Stuart drew a bases-loaded walk, Thomas rifled the first pitch deep into the right field seats.

Mantilla homered in the sixth and Ed Bressoud added a two-run homer for the Red Sox in the seventh. Willie Smith connected with the bases empty for the Angels while Lou Clinton blasted a two-run homer, both in the eighth.

JOHNSON UPSET

Kennon Wins; Finals Today In Kraft Meet

BASTROP (Special) — Defending champion Charles Kennon of Baton Rouge started off with an early barrage of birdies and then outlasted the comeback charge of former champion Don Sims, 2-1, under cloudless skies and the blazing sun of a typical July 4th day in the second round of the Kraft Paper Golf Tournament.

Kennon opened up with three straight birdies and a par to take a four stroke lead after four holes. Sims rallied and had a chance to bring the match even on 15, but missed a short putt. Kennon parred No. 17 to end it.

Medalist Chip Lyman from Monroe put on a stirring finish to eke out a one-up victory from Henry Cole in the closest match of the day.

Cole was two-up through 14, but Lyman eagled 16 and birdied 17 to draw the match even. Both men hit tremendous tee shots on 18 and both landed too close to the trees for a direct shot on the green.

Cole attempted to cut his ball around the trees, but hit them. His third shot then went over the green. By playing conservatively on his second shot, Lyman ended the match.

State amateur champion Clayton Cole of Monroe outlasted long-hitting George Warren, 3-1 and Paul Jones, last Morehouse Country Club member in the meet, defeated state amateur medalist Albin Johnson, 2-1.

Two matches will be played today in the finals of the meet.

The semi-finals start at 8:24 with Kennon meeting Cole and Lyman taking on Jones. Finals are slated to get underway about 1:30 p.m.

Santo's Homer Carries Chicago By Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ron Santo's three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning lifted the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 triumph over Milwaukee and shattered a brilliant pitching performance by Denny Lemaster.

Lemaster had allowed just two first-inning doubles and had faced the minimum 24 batters after that until Joe Amalfitano singled with one out in the ninth.

COMIN' UP AFIELD

Duck Hunters To Get Break

With Sam Hanna

(Editor's note — While Sam Hanna is in Baton Rouge covering the Louisiana legislature, staff writer Steve Henry is writing Comin' Up Afield)

By STEVE HENRY

Northeast Louisiana duck hunters, who haven't had too much to smile about for the past five years, should be all grins about the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission's current project in the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area in Lafourche Swamp east of Monroe.

To put things in simplest possible terms here's what the Commission is going to do in our Russell Sage area:

1. Build a permanent 400-acre flooded rest area for holding ducks where no hunting will be allowed.

2. Build a reservoir of "several thousand acres" to hold nearly seven feet of water year-around.

3. Throw up levees around several large green timber areas, these areas to be flooded before duck season every year with approximately 18 inches of water, providing ideal hunting conditions.

4. Plant large amounts of natural duck foods in Russell Sage.

5. Maintain adequate roads into all public hunting areas.

What this adds up to is the best and most positive step toward providing consistently good duck hunting in northeast Louisiana since the ridiculous and unfortunate draining of LaFourche some years ago.

Anyone who doesn't or can't see the effect these new developments in Russell Sage will have on wildfowling in the area just doesn't know anything about duck hunting.

The most important single development is the proposed rest area.

According to Wildlife Fish and Game Commission Chief Joe Herring, the area will hold up to 40,000 ducks, mostly mallards, during the entire season.

Herring, who only recently was stationed in this area, knows his business completely, and said the 40,000 duck estimate was almost guaranteed of being correct.

Holding ducks, of course, is the biggest problem faced by wildlife authorities in this part of Louisiana.

Flight ducks hit northeast Louisiana, get shot up badly, and can't find a place to settle and stay for over two days. Then they either quack their way back to Arkansas or whistle down to the cost, either way leaving hunters here holding the bag.

The new Russell Sage projected area will go a long way toward solving that problem.

The rest area will be located just off Highway 80, on the right side of the road if you're going away from Monroe, and adjacent to the main LaFourche Canal.

Rightly enough, this is the first project the Commission will complete, and be ready for use by next winter.

The permanent reservoirs, which are going to be encircled by nine-foot levees thrown up by Commission bulldozers and graders, will serve a number of constructive purposes.

For one thing, they'll provide a permanent source of water from which the green timber hunting areas will be flooded every fall.

This will be done by sluice gates that annually will be opened to let enough water into the green timber to provide ideal wading conditions.

At the end of the duck season, the green timber areas will be immediately drained. The timber in the area will profit from the annual flooding. In fact, the Commission expects mast production in the areas to increase substantially as a result of the one or two month inundation period, thereby providing even better duck and squirrel foods.

The permanent reservoirs, once the timber dies off and the territory becomes relatively open, will serve mainly as rest areas. Hunting won't be too good there, because no permanent blinds will be allowed anywhere in Russell Sage.

Therefore, the permanent areas will eventually add to the duck population permanently staying in Russell Sage during all November and December.

There will be permanent impoundments on both sides of Highway 80, with green timber hunting areas open to the public adjacent to these impoundments.

The Commission is planning an expenditure of some $500,000 in the Russell Sage area, according to Herring.

He said two years would be needed to complete the project, with preliminary construction having already begun in LaFourche.

There's nothing haphazard or visionary about this project. The Commission is doing something that will absolutely and positively improve duck hunting in northeast Louisiana, and sportsmen need to be aware of how much these developments in Russell Sage are going to help.

A lot of deer hunters are griping about the flooding of good deer woods, but their arguments don't hold enough water to satisfy even a desperate mallard.

Northeast Louisiana has less than 6,000 acres of good duck territory it can depend on from year to year.

And anybody with normal intelligence can figure out pretty quickly how much acreage is available to deer hunters, who less than ten years ago couldn't find a decent buck to shoot and wouldn't be able to shoot one today if it hadn't been for the Commission's work.

Now deer hunters are complaining about the Commission's taking a big step toward helping duck hunters, and it doesn't make sense. Some people, we suppose, are never satisifed, and have to make an issue out of something they know little, if anything, about.

Fortunately, the Commission knows what it's doing, and is going ahead with the Russell Sage project, knowing that in less than five years daily kill averages on waterfowl, and yearly population averages on wintering ducks in northeast Louisiana, are going to look a lot better.

Little Man's Corner

Fresh rains spilled into a few area lakes and streams this week, and little men did some good on just about every kind of game fish.

Twin City fishermen who reported excellent bream catches were E. W. Neely of West Monroe, Dwight Brown of Monroe, and J. H. Jackson of Monroe. They all caught the limit, but weren't saying where.

F. H. Summers caught some good bass, and Jay Cummings did, too. This happened in Bussey Brake where largemouths were hitting at night.

Several of the ones caught by Summers and Cummings weighed over five pounds.

And Robert Burley and Ronnie Williams took the limit of bass there at night, using the purple artifical worm. The bass weighed from three to five pounds apiece, and the stringer checked in at over 110 pounds.

At Old River near Deer Park, Otis Walker of Ridgecrest caught the limit of bream and specs. James Courtere and Hy Standifer, both of Vidalia, got the limit of white perch at the same place.

Other Vidalia fishermen catching the limit of specs were Jimmy Gaspard, Ronnie O'Neal, George Coley, Bill Lee and David O'Neal. They used shiners in the barpits near Vidalia to score.

And Jim Caire, also of Vidalia, got the limit of white perch. John Parker, Percy May, and Bill Strickland got the bass limit in the barpits, too.

John and Percy Peavy of West Monroe, used big red worms to catch the limit of bream at Lake Concordia, and George Lee Jr. took the limit of bass, trolling the Bomber deep in Blue Hole.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Boyd caught the limit of bream and catfish in Lake St. John, using catalpa worms after an afternoon thundershower. And three Winnsboro fishermen, Charles and Milton Ellis and Calvin Walker caught the limit of bream in Old River Lake, also using red worms.

Wert's Homer Lifts Detroit By Washington, 5-3

DETROIT (AP)—Don Wert's three-run homer in the sixth inning lifted the Detroit Tigers to a 5-3 victory over Washington Saturday as Dave Wickersham became the first American League pitcher to win 11 games.

Wert, who had been sidelined because of a wrist injury, replaced Dick McAuliffe at Shortstop in the third inning after McAuliffe was ejected by Umpire Cal Drummond for arguing about a called third strike.

The Tigers scored twice on four straight singles in the second inning, but Mike Brumley's first major league homer with two on in the fourth put the Senators ahead 3-2.

German Vaults To Record, 16-9

LEVERKUSEN, Germany (AP)—Wolfgang Reinhardt of West Germany smashed the European pole vault record Saturday with a leap of 16 feet, 9¼ inches. He made it on his third attempt.

The 21-year-old student, appearing at a local meet, first cleared 16-6½ to better the European mark of 15-5¾ set only two weeks ago by Manfred Preusker, an East German, at Leipzig.

Reinhardt now is third behind two Americans on the world list. Fred Hansen, a Rice graduate from Houston, tops the list with 17-2. John Pennel of Miami is next with 17¾.

Greens Lead Color Choice In Upholstery

Color and texture set the stage for upholstery fabrics this Summer of 1964. Colors and fabrics are vastly varied, yet there is a definite coordination of color and design in floor coverings, wall coverings, upholstery draperies and window shades that makes the consumer's job of selection relatively easy and enables her to achieve the coveted "decorated" look.

A further boon to the homemaker is the widespread use of stain and soil resistant finishes on the new fabrics which are much more in evidence.

COLOR: The greens lead the field with clear emerald to high-fashion olives to greenish bronzes (olive is also evident in the new wood finishes). Next in line are the yellows and golds, the tawny colors, with burnt orange into the reds, both of orange and ruby casts. Reds are coming up fast. The blues are much in the color picture, with a promise of future activity.

Clear, bold colors are well established, the more subtle shades pointing a new direction. Off - beat color combinations are a new trend, such as dark terra cotta and slate grey; charcoal, and mustard; blue with burnt orange and mustard. Combinations even take to solid colored upholstery fabrics where contrasting welting appears as a piping of mustard on white, white on navy, olive on coral. Accents of black are seen everywhere as a sharp new note.

Fall Handbags Will Swing From Shoulder

Straight from the shoulder is the handbag story for fall. Leather straps and long gold chains suspend money and make-up pouches, leaving the hands free for umbrellas and packages.

But here is some advice about this style from the New York City Police Department:

In crowds switch the bag to the front of you and keep your hand on the clasp. If you are carrying packages, hold them over the handbag.

Shoulder bags are the easiest pickings of all, say New York police, for pickpockets. The straps may be severed or the bag itself opened as it swings from the wearer's bag without anyone being aware of it.

PUNCHY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Here's a punch that's easy to make.

Combine one can frozen limeade concentrate, one can frozen orange juice concentrate (6 ounces each), one package (10 ounces) frozen sliced strawberries which have been thawed and 2 cups cold water; mix well. Stir 1 bottle (28 ounce size) gingerale into fruit mixture. Pour into punch cups. Top each serving with whipped cream. Makes about two quarts.

PROTEIN FOODS

Don't overcook protein foods. This will cause the protein to toughen and shrink. There is a tendency for the liquids to be squeezed out when shrinkage takes place. For example, overcooked meat is usually tough and dry.

Miss Bruscato To Wed Phillip Candella July 20

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene John Bruscato, 709 Arkansas Avenue, Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Phyllis Jean Bruscato to Phillip Leonard Candella. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wess Candella of Shreveport.

The weddding will be solemnized Monday, July 20 at 10 a.m. in St. Matthews Catholic Church, Monroe with The Rev. Edward Deevy and the Rev. Fale officiating.

The bride - elect has chosen her sister, Mrs. Beatrice Marsala of New Orleans, to serve as matron of honor and Miss Toni Candella of Shreveport, sister of the future bridegroom, as maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Phyllis Jo Monaco, Miss Linda Battistone, both cousins of the bride-elect; Miss Andria Marie Reno of Alexandria, cousin of the future groom; and Miss Carmen Shambro.

Flower girls will be Miss Angela Gay Bruscato, cousin of the bride-elect and Miss Lisa Sills and ringbearer will be Charles Eugene Marsala of New Orleans, her nephew. Serving as altar boys will be Jerry Spatafora and Anthony Varino, cousin of the bride-to-be.

Carl Roppolo of Shreveport, will attend his cousin as best man and chosen as ushers are Joseph Marsala, New Orleans; Joseph Ray Fertitta, Shreveport; Wess Candella Jr., Shreveport, brother of the prospective groom; Frank Eugene Bruscato, brother of the bride - elect; Frank Nicholas Bruscato, her cousin; Charles Marsala, Joseph Bruscato, cousin of the bride-to-be and Sammy Guarisco of Shreveport, cousin of the bridegroom.

Miss Bruscato is the granddaughter of Mrs. Rocco Monaco and the late Mr. Monaco and the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bruscato, all of Monroe. A graduate of St. Matthews high school, she attended Northeast Louisiana State College.

Mr. Candella is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Leon Ferlito of Shreveport and the late Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Candella of Alexandria. He was graduated from St. John's Academy in Shreveport and attended Louisiana Polytechnic Institute in Ruston.

BLEND CHEESE

If you want to freeze cream cheese for a spread, blend it with some heavy cream; freezing cream cheese alone is not recommended.

New Machine Washable Wools Are Introduced

The chemical formula for water, H2o, is the appropriate name given to new machine-washable wools.

The materials are processed with a formula that limits shrinkage to three per cent, reduces after-drying wrinkles and lessens the tendency of wool to pill.

After extensive market testing the material is now appearing in men's shirts and robes as well as women's dresses, skirts and children's coats.

O'Connor-Ford Vows Read In Home Ceremony

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Townsend of Bastrop was the setting for the ceremony Monday, June 29 which united in marriage Miss Linda Ann Ford and Robert E. O'Connor Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Ford, Bastrop and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. R. E. O'Connor and the late Mr. O'Connor of Rayville.

Rev. Doyle Coody of Bastrop Church of God performed the double ring vows at 6:30 p.m. Summer flowers and soft candlelight formed a background for the exchange of vows.

The bride wore a two piece ensemble of white silk linen and a short veil of illusion attached to a small tiara. She carried a crescent bouquet of feathered white carnations and white orchids atop a small white Bible, a gift from the groom's mother.

Miss Anne Hemphill, Monroe, served as maid of honor and only attendant for the bride. She wore a two-piece dress of pale yellow silk with white accessories and a corsage of yellow pompons.

John McNeil O'Connor attended his brother as best man.

Mrs. Ford, mother of the bride, wore a sheath of moss green silk linen with matching accessories, complemented by a corsage of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother was wearing a maize silk jersey model with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception in the family room of the Townsend home. Assisting with courtesies were Miss Jerri Ford, Mrs. Barbara McIntyre and Miss Rita Bounds.

The couple will be at home at 800 Auburn, Monroe.

Fall Gloves Go Baroque

Matching the new richness of fashion, gloves for fall will be important accents. Baroque is the word for this newly sumptuous look.

The main theme is the cuff, which on short gloves may be as jeweled as a bracelet or puffed in ombred tones of silk ribbon. A butterfly design may be embroidered in tiny pearls and amethyst beads as a cuff on a pale gray glove.

The baroque theme harks back to the 18th century, when gloves were an important and expensive part of a lady's wardrobe. We no longer wear them as by an unwritten law, but when a white fabric glove has a white velvet cuff with a sunburst jewel, who would want to leave gloves at home?

MISS SARAH VIRGINIA AVERETT

SHELLEY WINTERS BACK

NEW YORK (AP) —Shelley Winters comes back to Broadway next season in "The Days of the Dancing," a drama by James Bridges.

A break-in tour of summer theaters under the direction of Timmy Everett is scheduled. The play was well-received when tested at Venice, Calif., the locale of its story. Miss Winters is to portray a mind reader helping a group of lonely, young people find themselves.

Now Tint Shoes In Two-Tone

Fashion note: Shoes tinted to match summer dresses are still the chic "costume" look. And, if you're getting this effect yourself this summer with one of the aerosol shoe coloring kits, try a new trick. Make a two - toned shoe by putting a small piece of masking tape from the center of the toe, to the middle of the instep. Spray one side, let it dry. Then switch the masking tape to the other side and repeat with another color.

Always use one dark and one lighter color — such as deep cherry red with light pink; emerald green with pale moss green. The aerosol dispensers make light work of this kind of footwork.

MRS. WILLIAM WALTON HOWELL

Sherry Johnette Bond Weds William W. Howell

In a setting of white blossoms and candlelight, Miss Sherry Johnette Bond became the bride of William Walton Howell at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday, June 27 in First Baptist Church of Bastrop. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smitherman Bond, Bastrop and he is the son of Mrs. Alan Andrews, Bastrop and William Spurgeon Howell of Tallulah.

Hurricane lamps adorned with clusters of white blossoms and satin bows marked pew caps. The altar rail was outlined with tall yellow tapers and lemon foliage in the center of which was a fountain of gladioli florets. On either side were espalier trees fashioned of white asters and emerald foliage.

Dr. Ray Rust performed the double ring ceremony following nuptial music by Marvin Daniels, organist and Mrs. Hugh Parker, soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was wearing a gown of candlelight peau de soie, with Sabrina neckline edged in Alencon lace, reembroidered with pearls and sequins. Back interest of the voluminous skirt which terminated in a full cathedral train, featured a butterfly panel, lavishly embellished with pearls and sequins. Her tiered veil of imported silk illusion was held in place by a full circlet of seed pearls. She carried a cluster of white butterfly roses and lily of the valley in a colonial design.

Miss Melba Elizabeth Barham served as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Dianne Cecile Bryant, Mrs. Monty Rawls Hudson, Miss Linda Ross Crowe, all of Bastrop; Mrs. Robert Francis Perkins of Monroe; Miss Dorothy Dale Hernandez of Leesville and Miss Leta Horan of McGehee, Ark.

They were gowned identically in sweeping frocks of willow green iridescent taffeta, with wide oval necklines and elbow sleeves. A bow of self fabric marked the back waistline and extended into wide panels to the hemline. Matching taffeta bows formed their headdresses and they carried bouquets of yellow roses, salal leaves with velvet tubing trailing from the main cluster, ending in tiny circlets of flowers.

Mr. Howell served his son as best man and groomsmen included Carl Fredrick Jory of Eunice; Lawrence Alford Michaud of Bastrop; David Olin Melder Jr., Fred Lee Roberts and William K. Lawrence Jr., of McGehee, Ark., and Stephen A. Reeves of Arcadia. Candles were lighted by John Marvin Hill, Bastrop and Thomas Iglehart of Jennings.

Mr. and Mrs. Bond were hosts at a reception in the social room of the church following the ceremony. Mrs. Bond was wearing a sheath gown of pink lace with chiffon drape and matching flower hat. Her corsage was a pink - throated white orchid. Mrs. Andrews, mother of the groom, chose a gown of champagne silk embossed lace over ivory taffeta and an ostrich feather hat in ivory tones. Her corsage was of green orchids.

Centered with a silver epergne holding white roses and tapers, the bride's table was draped in white satin and tulle caught in poufs at the corners.

Guests were greeted in the foyer by Mrs. Alonzo W. Moore and Mrs. Herman Meador, while Mrs. James W. Crawford presided over the guest book. Serving at the bride's table were Mrs. Guy Rumsey of Haynesville and Mrs. Leon D. Bond of Dallas, Tex., aunts of the bride; Mrs. Harold Hart of McGehee and Mrs. E. M. White, aunts of the bridegroom. Members of the house party included Mrs. C. L. Shipman, Mrs. G. H. Jarrell, Mrs. H. E. McKnight, Mrs. Clifton Beasley, Mrs. William C. Grobe Jr., Mrs. Irby H. Drummond, Mrs. Oliver A. Doggett. Tea girls were Miss Vicki Rumsey, Miss Janet Ruth Gallaugher of Jennings; Miss Nancy Kay Brown of Oak Grove; Miss Virginia Upton of Shreveport; Miss Penelope Sims, Miss Beth Roberts and Miss Linda Blackard of Bastrop. Rice bags were distributed by Monty Hudson and Kathy Crawford.

For a wedding trip to Gatlinburg, Tenn., the bride changed into a dressmaker suit of white linen with a picture hat of pink and red cabbage roses, and pink accessories. The couple will be at home for the summer in Little Rock, Ark., where Mr. Howell is employed by an architecture firm. In the fall they will return to Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Howell is a graduate of Bastrop high school and attends Louisiana State University where she will graduate in January 1965 with a degree in elementary education. She is a member of Kappa Delta sorority and was named an outstanding senior in 1964. A graduate of McGehee high school, Mr. Howell is a fifth year senior at LSU, where he will receive a bachelor's degree in architecture in June 1965. He is a member of Kappa Delta social fraternity and the student chapter of the American Institute of Architects, for which he serves as vice-president.

Combination Of Things Make The Party

A good party consists of the right guests, the right food, and the right setting. But, sometimes an extra spark helps to start and maintain a lively level of interest, suggests the Society of American Florists.

One choice for a timely theme is Outer Space.

With this kind of party, the centerpiece sets the scene. You might start with a large glass ball or a styrofoam ball. Girdle it with a paper ring, on which you can set a smaller ball or a multi - pointed Christmas tree ornament as a satellite. Make a contrasting ring, set at angles to the paper one, of rocket - red carnations and nestle the ball in lycopodium foliage.

You might time the party to track the actual orbit of an earth satellite or a manned orbital shot. You can have a current events quiz with pertinent questions gathered from newspapers and news magazines or you might play charades with topics limited to the field of outer space.

The fun prize might be an especially made ticket to the Moon or a lifetime Martian Visitors' Visa.

In any case the Outer Space Party is a winning ticket to timely fun.

LET RIPEN

BANANA SURPRISE

Moulded cereal with banana surprise was one of the earliest recipes developed by United Fruit Co. home economists for its 1904 "recipe" booklet.

Turn any left-over breakfast cereal, while still hot, into cups rinsed in cold water, half filling the cups. When cold, scoop out the centers, and fill the open spaces with sliced bananas; turn from the cups onto a buttered agate pan, fruit downward and set into a hot oven to become very hot. Remove with a broad bladed knife to cereal dishes. Serve at once with sugar and cream or milk.

CORNY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Here's the recipe for a handy asparagus and corn bread dish.

Crumble enough leftover corn bread to make 1½ cups. Toss lightly with ½ cup shredded process American cheese, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and 3 tablespoons melted butter. Prepare 1½ lbs. fresh asparagus, then partially cook it. Place half of asparagus in shallow 1½ quart casserole. Sprinkle with half of crumb mixture; top with remaining asparagus and crumb mixture. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 10 minutes. Serves six.

H. Chatham, 2336 Jonesboro Road and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wages, 2325 Jonesboro Road.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white peau de soie, styled with fitted bodice, round neckline and long pointed sleeves. She carried a bouquet of feathered carnations with streamers of pearls and satin ribbon.

Miss Doshie Snowden was maid of honor and matrons of honor were Mrs. Melba Saterfiel and Mrs. Janett McKnight. Bridesmaids were Misses Pat Noble, Wanda Perry and Charlotte Moffett. They wore identical gowns of pink cotton satin, styled with three-quarter sleeves and front-pleated skirts. Their headdresses were fashioned of pink tulle and two pink organza roses. They carried cascade bouquets of white chrysanthemums with pink ribbon.

Candles were lighted by Larry Chatham and Denna Reinniger. Donna Chatham served as flower girl and ring bearer was Ricky Lynn McKnight.

Doyle Saterfiel served as best man and groomsmen were Tim McKeithen, Lawrence Dunn, James McKnight, Donald Chatham and W H. Dycus. Ushers included Richard Chatham and Charles Strange.

SCATTER PILLOWS

One of the easiest ways to brighten a room is to add a scattering of toss pillows in accent colors. In selecting the pillows be certain they are filled with latex foam rubber molded to shape, not just bits of shredded foam. Then you can be certain the pillows will remain plump and neat as a "dress-up touch" to your living room.

BATHWRAP

The luxurious way to dry off after a bath is to swathe yourself in a cozy terry cloth bathwrap.

The latest styles include drawstring capes, full - length robes with flip-up collars, and full cardigan robes. All are as "tubbable" — in washer and dryer—as the traditional bath towel.

MR. AND MRS. ROGER DALE KINNISON

Lady Of Fatima Church Scene Of Couple's Vows

The wedding of Miss Frances Evon Canterberry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Canterberry of Swartz to Roger Dale Kinnison of Crossett, Ark., was solemnized Friday, June 26 in Our Lady of Fatima Catholic Church, Monroe. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Kinnison of Sterlington.

Baskets of white gladioli formed a background at the altar where the double ring ceremony at 5 p.m. was performed by the Rev. George Martinez. Miss Linda Callender, organist, provided nuptial music and accompanied Danny Crowley who sang Ave Maria.

Mr. Canterberry gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a floor length gown of antique white peau de soie with bodice overlaid with Chantilly lace. Her veil of illusion was attached to a tiered coif and she carried a bouquet of yellow and white roses in the form of a cross.

Miss Kitsy Thompson served as maid of honor and Miss Carolyn Eubanks was bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns of ice blue peau de soie with matching pillbox hats and tulle veils. They wore long white gloves and carried single long stemmed pink roses.

Serving as best man was Larry Senn of Sterlington and groomsman was Jerry Brazeal. Ushers were Kenneth Canterberry and Michael Kinnison.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Canterberry wore a pink lace gown with white accessories and a pink orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother chose a white linen dress embroidered with pink flowers, white accessories and a pink orchid corsage.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents where a rice bag tree graced a table in the entrance. The bride's table in the dining room was covered with a white lace cloth over pink satin and centered with the tiered wedding cake, encircled with ivy. Champagne was served from one end of the table.

Miss Kitsy Thompson served the cake and Miss Linda Callender presided at the punch bowl. Miss Mary Tripp was at the bride's book and nieces of the bride assisted with the courtesies.

For a short wedding trip the bride changed into a pale green suit with white accessories. The couple will be at home at 809 W. 10th, in Crossett, where Mr. Kinnison is employed.

Among the out-of-town guests were the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Newdy Jeansonne of Ville Platte.

GUARANTEES

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sometimes the marriage ceremony involved guarantees, according to historians.

The veil over the bride's face long ago indicated, for example, that she had been secluded from men. Her white robe was a warrant of purity. Another tradition —the notion that it is bad luck for the bridegroom to see the bride before the ceremony on the wedding day.

STORE CHOCOLATES

If a box of chocolates comes your way on a hot summer day, and you want to save it for later use, wrap it appropriately and put it in the freezer. It should stay in good condition for as long as six months!

PREVENT ACCIDENTS

Keep pesticides in their original containers. Insect spray stored in an old soda pop bottle could tempt a small child. Keep the label on the container. It gives instructions on what to do in case of an accident.

FISHNET FABRICS

"Fishnet" fabrics are fast becoming decorating favorites because these airy fabrics achieve a light, spacious effect on windows and add softness to large wall expanses.

Best of all, many of these nets —made of acrylic, polyester, and nylon fibers — are safe for sudsing in home washers.

DIETERS

Bike Shirts Sans Bike

Over here the polo shirt is worn by some people who do not even know what the game is all about. In London now the sporting thing to do is to wear the bicycle shirt, sans bicycle.

But the young ladies who wear these over their shorts know very well what a cycle race is. Currently this is as hot a sport with the best pedalers as national British heroes.

AMUSEMENTS

CURTAIN CALL

Little Theatre sent out two mailings over the weekend. One was the "My Fair Lady" leaflet mentioned in last Sunday's column. The other went to last season's membership list to announce "Simple Simon," and we are grateful to Jack Trousdale for his help with it.

"Simple Simon," a delightful fantasy with songs and dances, will run for three matinees, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 17, 18 and 19, at 2:30 p.m. Cash admission is 75 cents for students and $1 for adults. This entertaining children's show is not part of the summer membership for "My Fair Lady," and tickets are available independently.

Advance orders may be placed at Box 868 prior to opening of the box office at Strauss Playhouse on Wednesday, July 15. Thereafter, Jerilyn Gilstrap will be on duty from 12 noon to 8 p.m. daily to take reservations by phone (FA 3-1235) or in person for both "Simple Simon," and "My Fair Lady."

LARGE ORDERS

In a single day last week, we received three orders for "My Fair Lady" tickets in blocks of 10 to 20. Since most of the advance sale has specified center section, the equivalent of four of them has already been taken. Every seat in the intimate Strauss Playhouse is a good one, of course, but for those who strongly prefer the center, time is running short to place orders.

Tickets for "My Fair Lady" may be requested by writing Box 868, Monroe, enclosing $3.75 per adult and $2.50 per student with a self-addressed stamped envelope. Althought seats still are available for all dates, it would be well to give a first and second choice of performances betwen July 24 and August 2, including a July 26 matinee.

For the convenience of out-of-towners and others, mail orders for "My Fair Lady" may still be sent after the box office opens on July 15 and they will get immediate attention.

PLEA FOR DESK

Technical director Lonny Fraze asks us to put in a plea for a Victorian writing desk, chairs and wicker lawn furniture for "My Fair Lady," but he says Edwardian or Georgian will do equally well. He also needs two old gramophones with horns and four discarded bicycle wheels. Volunteers to help with set painting and construction are most welcome, whether morning, afternoon or evening.

Measurements have been sent off for the nearly 100 costumes that are being rented for "My Fair Lady." These have been freshly created for the summer season by the Salt Lake Costume Company. Even though costume rental is a major expense, Little Theatre felt that "My Fair Lady" was too big to impose on our own costume committee.

SINGER, ARTIST

Andree Robinson, widely known for her folk singing, is also a talented artist. She has executed a handsome large poster for "My Fair Lady," in which she has reproduced the clever sketch used in the original publicity for the show. It shows George Bernard Shaw manipulating a puppet of Henry Higgins who in turn manipulates a puppet of Eliza.

Quite a few businesses are being very kind to Little Theatre in printing a "My Fair Lady" reminder in their regular ads. Indeed it is hard to imagine how we would get along without the generous support so freely extended to us by the businessmen of the community.

M. Kaplan and Son donated the reinforcing rods needed for balustrades in one scene. The wardrobe gained the welcome addition of some cadet uniforms of The Citadel, thanks to Col. Randolph Percy.

Last Tuesday was Donna Barber's birthday and her fellow cast members surprised her with a huge cake that quickly vanished down hungry throats.

A postcard from V. P. Dalrymple reports that while in Amsterdam he stayed just across from the house where Anne Frank and her family were hidden. V. P. appeared in our production of the play, so his visit had special poignancy for him.

LANDON PREDICTS

TOPKEA, Kan. (UPI) — Alf M. Landon Thursday predicted victory for Sen. Barry Goldwater in his bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

Landon, who has been uncommitted in the struggle for the nomination, said, "it's all over. Senator Goldwater has it."

He said the party should now turn its attention to filling the rest of the ticket.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Arranging Series Opens

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The first of a series of "teaching programs" on basic flower arranging was presented by Dr. John Wright, Louisiana Tech, Ruston, last Wednesday. This was the type program that has been requested by quite a number of garden clubbers and would - be flower arrangers.

Dr. Wright kindly consented to give us six lessons. The first, "Mechanics," for the arranger was the topic. Of course, the containers would be the first thing to consider. Dr. Wright showed several types of containers such as the tall cylinder, the low bowl, the pillar vase and the compote-type.

There are certain holders that are best used for each type of container. These were displayed. The needlepoint holder, Dr. Wright explained, would be best to use in the low bowl, or shallow compote. For deep, cylinder vases, the oasis serves best, letting a part of it extend above the top of the container so that stems may be slanted or short stems or filler flowers could be added easily.

DEPTH

It isn't necessary for the oasis to reach the whole depth of the container. Sand could be placed first to hold the oasis, thus, eliminating the use of excess amount. Foil placed around the oasis will help to retain moisture and keep large stems from breaking it. Sometimes it is necessary to brace it with a covering of chicken wire, especially if large, woody stems are used. It is interesting to learn that small stems, or soft brittle stems may be placed together, taped, then cut to an even length before sticking them into the needle holder. Otherwise, they would not stay securely but, would have a tendency to fall over. Large woody stems should be cut (slit) at the end so that it will be easier to place it in a needle type holder.

PRUNING SHEARS

About tools — Dr. Wright explained that it is quite necessary to have a good collection of proper pruning shears or snips. There are large and small types. Some are needed for soft stems and wire, or large stems. A knife also is needed. Example: Whenever cutting stalks such as banana a knife is the best tool. Scissors are always handy to have nearby. When pine needs clipping the scissors are best to use. Cutting tape needs this particular tool. Don't cut stems with scissors. Even when we gather our flowers this is a fault of some gardeners. This pinches the stem and closes the passage way for water. Especially when cutting roses — use a sharp knife and cut at a slant.

WIRE NEEDED

Wire is a must for the arranger. We find that there are endless uses for wire. Sometimes it is best to use the short wire. There is less waste when just a small piece is needed. Wire comes in different gauges such as 18, 20, and 24. The larger the gauge the smaller the wire size. Heavy flowers need the larger wire, while in corsage making we need the thin, small wire. It is good to have a selection of several types on hand.

Clay is very necessary. We sometimes wonder what we did before the nice soft floral clay was invented. The needle point holder must be secured into the container with clay before doing a thing toward arranging. Dr. Wright showed the simple method of rolling a piece of soft clay between the palm of the hand, then placing it on the backside of the needle holder so that it encircles the round holder within about one - half inch from the edges. This keeps it neat looking and gives it room to spread when the holder is pressed into the bowl and twisted, thus, making a water tight vacuum.

Floral picks and twistems can be added to the list of necessary tools to use in arranging. The picks may be purchased at a florist shop in natural wood or green or brown colors. Also, the sizes vary.

Many arrangers have many more tools to work with, but, if you could get these basic tools you would be safe to begin your lessons. The worst way to start is to be handicapped because you lack the proper, basic tools.

Dr. Wright will continue next Wednesday with the next lesson, "Constructing the Arrangement."

While driving around town searching for beauty in the landscape, and there is plenty now to be admired, be sure to drive by the home of Irene Reid, 1621 Emerson St. She has one of the most beautiful flower gardens in Monroe. You will give yourself a real treat if you go to see this garden. Be sure to stop long enough to see the patio. You have a special invitation from Irene, who loves to share this beauty with others.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Set Plants Along Roads

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The new super - highways throughout the south are monotonous and sterile race tracks, and gardeners everywhere should demand that the sides of these highways be planted with the native plants that are growing just out of sight along them.

It was necessary to stablilize the banks and areas along our new thoroughfares with grass and drought resistant plants just as soon as they were built, but it is now time to plant other things as well.

VARIETY IN VIEW

It would be a mistake to plant trees, shrubs and perennials in such a way that they might distract the drivers eye from the road ahead, but masses of flowering shrubs and tough kinds of wild flowers would add some variety to the view ahead and dispel the monotony of miles and miles of nothing but grass and lespedeza.

There is no reason why we should sacrifice the natural appearance of our rich and beautiful country to speed. While we are racing to the beauty spots and recreation acreas of the south, we should be able to enjoy the natural character of the country through which we are passing.

MANY SPECIES

Here in the south where there are more different kinds of trees shrubs and wild flowers than in any other part of the world, except eastern Asia, nature has given us an embarrassment of riches with which to adorn our roadsides. Fortunately, there are many plants in our woods and fields which are largely self maintaining. We could not afford the up-keep on some types of plants if they were set out along the highways, but there are many kinds of native plants which are compact, neat looking, and disease-free.

Masses of the low-growing native shrubs would give us some color when they are in bloom and a neat appearance when they are not. Many of these deni-zens turn beautiful colors in the fall. The evergreen species would cheer up the roadsides in winter. The berry bearing ones would add color from November until February.

TIME CONSUMING

We do not propose that any great planting program should be completed in a short time. There are many practical considerations involved. For instance, most of the topsoil has been sheared off the new cuts and dumped into the fills in building these new roads. Topsoil will have to be brought in for most of our native plants, though some kinds will grow in poor soil. The steep sides of roads will support only the most drought resistant plants, but there are such species in addition to the camel-like grasses we are so fortunate to have on these cuts now.

The highway landscapers have really performed a near miracle in establishing anything at all on the raw soil they have been confronted with, and we are grateful for the greens and the browns along the superroads. But is is certainly time that we began to restore some of the native flora. Otherwise, we might as well be in spaceships on the way to the moon.

QUAKE RECORDED

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The University of California seismograph Thursday recorded an earthquake "of substantial proportions" about 20 to 30 miles west of Vancouver Island at 1:06 p.m. EDT.

The shock registered 5.5 to 6 on the Richter Scale and was followed by a number of aftershocks in rapid order.

One of the aftershocks registered 3 and occurred at 1:09 p.m. while another registered 5.5 and occurred at 1:20 p.m.

Dr. Charles Richter of Caltech at Pasadena, Calif., also said the earthquake registered 5.5 on the same scale at 1:07.22 p.m. EDT. He did not fix a specific direction or distance, but said it was about 1,200 miles distant.

New Ideas Expressed In Designs

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

New ideas in home improvements originate sometimes when designers or architects cannot find exactly what they want for a particular home. So they design it.

So it was at one of the three houses of Good Taste at the World's Fair, explains Eugene Stephenson who was co - designer with Ellen McCluskey and Everett Brown.

"Through it is a traditional house, and the kitchen with its island cooking arrangement is in a contemporary mood, I thought it would be nice to have a floor covering that was in an early American theme," he says.

What he came up with was a hooked rug design in vinyl in one-foot squares that can be put down in any plain-color floor to "permit a nice soft finish, with all the easy care of the hard surface." It was installed like an area rug in the dining section of the kitchen where a dinette set in wrought iron is another innovation of Stephenson's.

OVAL-SHAPED

The large oval-shaped table has a cherry top and wrought iron base. Chairs have wooden seats and metal frames with pillow-back tops he thinks of as Shaker style.

Ellen McCluskey, who doesn't believe in family togetherness," had an opportunity to send that message home in her decoration of a master bedroom that can be a hideaway. She put a nice big table in the bedroom so that parents "can get away from the clatter in other rooms."

'It's a good place to have a nice quiet repast when teenagers have the crowd in," she says. "Parents should think of their bedrooms more in terms of studio rooms when teen-agers overwhelm the house," she explains. "It's something parents should consider when young people are approaching the teen years, and rooms need refurnishing.

STUDIO-TYPE

"I'd like to see all parents have studio-type bedrooms — their own dining table (drop-leaf is good in small rooms), a desk where they can work quietly away from the hubbub which can descend on them at any time without warning, and a television."

She likes to see a library in a house, if it is at all possible. There are both a library and a family room in the eight-room house of Good Taste.

Wide Variety Of Flowers In Garden Area

MANY (Special) — Day and night blooming tropical and hardy waterlilies, hibiscus, graptophyllum roseum, cigar plants, flowering shrubs, aromatic herbs, annuals and acres of old and new roses are the summer spectaculars at Hodges Gardens, according to Walter Chalupnik, horticulturist.

Favorites among the tropical waterlilies are the unique water-platters, including Victoria Cruziana and Euryaleferox with their large floating leaves and the exotic Blue Giant with flowers 18 inches in diameter. Other fine varieties include Director Moore, Judge Hitchcock, Persian Lilac, General Pershing, Talisman, Pink Platter, Sunbeam, St. Louis, Isabelle Pring, Emily Grant Hutchings, H. C. Haarstick and the Missouri White.

HARDY VARIETIES

Hardy varieties include Glorisoa, James Bry Don, Comanche, Escarboucle, Lustrous and Newton.

Drawing a lot of attention in the rose pavillion on the hill side where thousands of modern roses bloom from early May until frost is the purple summer-blooming wisteria (milletia megasperma). Atop another hill are hundreds of old roses once threatened with extinction and unnamed specimens for All-American Rose Selections, Inc.

UNUSUAL SHAPE

Unusual in shape and color are the flowers on the cigar plant and orchid bush. A Mexican herb, the cigar flower has no petals but a slender bright red calyx tipped with white and gray suggests its name. Also distinguished by its oddly shaped blossoms and uniquely formed leaves is the orchid bush (Bauhinia galpini).

Exotic flora from distant rain forests fill the greenhouses and the natural scenic areas are ideal for summer picnics.

Gates are open from sunup to sundown in this fabulous garden owned and operated by the non-profit A. J. and Nona Trigg Hodges Foundation located 15 miles south of Many on U.S. Highway 171.

Kitchens and bathrooms are two areas where homeowners can satisfy their desires for bright colors, broad patterns and individual decorating touches.

Striking designs and brilliant hues that might be out of place in other parts of the house are greeted with cries of delight and admiration when displayed in the kitchen and the bathroom. It is there, for instance, where you will find the unusual and off-beat in wall paper, perfectly acceptable as long as there is a harmonizing note in the overall motif.

EXAMPLE

A typical example of what can be done in the bathroom is the application of a new five-foot-wide accent panel of plastic-finished hardboard. Placed on the wall over the tub, one of these panels transforms the wall into any one of nine attractive scenes and designs including a seascape, a mountain view, a desert and Oriental setting.

The murals feature gold-on-white artwork, with gold anodized moldings. Matching white panels are available for the side walls. The panels can be installed on any solid backing.

FIRST STEP

First step in the installation process is laying a heavy bead of caulking around the top of the tub, installing edge molding and adding a thick bead of caulking in the molding channel. A notched spreader is used to apply a thin coat of special mastic to the back of the hardboard panel. The mural then is placed in position on the wall, with a certain amount of pressure to assure a strong bond, after which the inside corner moldings are cut and nailed into place.

MEASURED

The end walls are measured, and the white side panels cut to fit. They also are attached to the walls with the mastic. The outside corner moldings are fitted and installed, using a hammer and wood block to tap them into place.

To complete the installation, another thin bead of caulking is laid around the moldings, an extra precaution to insure a water-tight job.

The five-foot wide mural panels can be obtained at most lumber and building supply yards in either five-foot or six-foot heights.

INSPIRATION sparked this photograph of a Long Island church by Ago Hint, an engineer of Middle Island, N. Y. It came from a first lesson assignment on Creative Seeing for Famous Photographers School, Westport, Conn. Hobbyist Hint is active in his company's camera club but has had no previous photographic training.

CAMERA Angles

Can a person be taught photography through the mail — its fundamentals, techniques, aesthetic and creative aspects, its applications — and thereby eventually become an accomplished photographer?

After a visit to Westport, Conn., my answer is "Yes!"

Photography has become "Famous" in this little New England town and its fame spreads daily throughout the country and abroad, courtesy of the U. S. postal system.

DORNE LAUNCHED

By that I mean the Famous Photographers School of Westport, Conn., is now in active operation, teaching 1,800 students through the mail. After more than five years of planning and preparation it was launched a half-year ago by Albert Dorne, the artist who created the Famous Artists Schools and the Famous Writers Schools.

The photography section is housed in its own two-story brick building on a 'campus" with no visible students. But it has many visitors inspecting its unique teaching system. Dorne's proven formula of home-study teaching in art and writing has been applied to photography.

A director was needed, an authority of stature who could inspire others. They found him in Victor Keppler, a 35-year-veteran of photo know-how and a dynamo of enthusiasm. Next came a 10-man team of specialists whose knowledge and experience could be distilled into 24 lessons which home study students could absorb and apply.

GUIDING FACULTY

The guiding faculty is a Who's Who in Photography: Arthur d'Arazien, leading photographer of big business; Richard Avedon, high fashion specialist; Philippe Halsman, portraitist, magazine ace and author; Ezra Stoller, architecural expert; Irving Penn, Bert Stern and Richard Beattie, award-winning advertising photography trio; Harry Garfield, child photography specialist; Alfred Eisenstaedt, pioneer in photo journalism; Joseph Costa, "Mr. Press Photographer" of the newspaper field.

Each student is not just a name or a post box number. He is a "personality folder" with a snapshot of himself and a file describing his education, hobbies, experience and ambition. This background and his progress are reviewed by each resident instructor with every lesson and exchange of correspondence. The student's efforts are corrected on a tissue overlay on his photo, noting where improvements can be made in lighting, composition, camera angle, exposure or subject matter.

A glance at random folders showed how the students progressed and improved as the first lessons and instructors' criticism too kroot. It is evident the urge to seek self-education is usually accompanied by an ability to benefit from instruction. But progress is an individual's responsibility and in home study schools the students have the strongest motivation to get their money's worth.

APPEAL

With 52 million Amercians taking pictures each year, learning photography by mail will appeal to those who desire a great deal more than casual snapshooting. Those with ambition and the potential can study at their own pace in their own environment with a normal three year limit. They can make photography a creative outlet, a rewarding pastime or a full-time career.

Weed Balk In Marigolds Is Claimed

By EARL ARONSON

Does the popular marigold help control weeds, nematodes and other garden pests?

Dave Burpee, a staunch booster of the marigold, says scientific research and observation by horticulturists in this country, England and the Netherlands seem to show that the annual flowering plant has a "salutory effect on the growth of other plants around it."

In tests at an English research station, Burpee reported, starchy-rooted weeds and nematodes within a three-foot range of marigolds were drastically reduced or eliminated.

UNANSWERED

"Many questions remain unanswered," Burpee added. "Enouh is known, however, to give gardeners a sporting chance of exterminating weeds (with marigolds) that they cannot kill in other ways."

In a recent book, "Gardening Without Poisons," Beatrice Trum Hunter said the root exudates of certain marigolds "show promise against certain nematodes (a microscopic insect) that attack potatoes and strawberries as well as against wilts of potatoes and tomatoes."

One Dutch nurseryman reported he could defeat certain bulb-attacking nematodes by planting American marigolds (Tagetes erecta) before planting his narcissus bulbs.

Another nurseryman said that interplanting roses with marigolds helped restore strength to roses damaged by nematodes.

The marigold also was reported helpful in inhibiting wireworms, bindweed, ground ivy and ground elder — and in regenerating depleted soil.

And for the benefit of gardeners who would like to to their own testing, marigolds may be planted in the open as soon as the ground has become warm.

TWIG GIRDLERS

If you see leafy twigs on your lawn in the late summer or early fall, before the seasonal time for such damage, look for twig girdlers or pruners.

At adult stage, these insects are beetles, gray or brown, 3-8 to one inch long. Their favorite haunts are oaks, maples, elms, hickories or other shade trees.

The girdler chews a band around a twig, desposits eggs in the nearly severed portion. The wind or weight breaks the twig off. The larvae or grubs develop in the fallen twigs.

The twig pruner lays eggs in the axils of leaves near the twig tips in early summer. When the grubs hatch, they bore through the stem.

The best control is to burn the freshly fallen twigs.

Here's The Answer

QUESTION: I intend to make a ping pong table for my two boys. I have two large pieces of plywood which, together, will make a playing surface 5 feet by 9 feet. The table will be used in the basement of our house, but can not be kept open all the time because of lack of space.

I recently saw some new folding steel legs which look as though they would be just right for the table, since they can be folded up after use. The plywood then could be stacked against the wall until ready for use the next time.

Can this type of leg assembly be used if I place a 2 by 4 between each pair of legs? I figure that one assembly at each end of the table will be sufficient.

ANSWER: The kind of leg assembly you mention is ideal for holding up a table tennis surface which must be set aside after each use. But you have made a slight miscalculation. Your table is made up of two large pieces of plywood, which means they must be buttered together while a game is in progress.

If you place one pair of legs at the end of the table and another pair at the other end, your table surface will have no support in the center. You can see, therefore, it is necessary to use three pairs of legs for support, one at each end and one in the center. Be sure that the legs you purchase have nonskid plastic caps on the bottom to prevent them from slipping too easily.

Lawns Need Special Care

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

During the hot dry months, it is especially important to take special care of your lawns. One important thing to remember is not to mow the lawn too closely. All grasses are affected during periods of drouth, so water once or twice a week, but give the lawn a good soaking instead of watering lightly every afternoon.

If your lawn grass is St. Augustine keep check on chinch bugs especially during the usually dry months of July and August. If yur lawn turns brown in spots and you suspect chinch bugs, cut the bottom out of a coffee can, sink into sod and fill with water. Allow to set for a few minutes. If chinch bugs are present they will come to the top. They are small brownish to black bugs. To control chinch bugs use one of the following chemicals, diazinon, aspon, BHC-DDT, ethion or frithion. Follow very closely the manufacturers' direction for application.

Be sure to remove clipping to prevent build-up of thatch.

Get The Most From Color In Landscape

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

In landscaping your home, try to provide color for the better part of the year, regardless of season.

Of course, evergreen will provide the fresh green color throughout the year. Other trees and shrubs offer colorful barks and berries or attractive branch formations.

In planting, consider whether the shrubs are easy to grow, if they are attractive for long periods, whether they bloom, if they may be used in flower arrangements indoors, and whether they are hardy for your locale.

Evergreens desirable for their foilage include juniper, cedar, arbor vitae, yews, blue spruce and various pines.

Flowering evergreens include rhododendrons, laurels, pieris and azaleas.

SEASONAL

Deciduous shrubs, which lose their leaves in winter offer great seasonal color — among them roses for all summer, forsythia early in the spring, viburnum and flowering quince, another early garden brightener. (Try a few sprigs of flowering quince for a graceful indoor arrangement.)

For flaming fall foliage there is the winged eunonymous. Depending on the climate, cotoneaster may be evergreen or deciduous, and it has bright red berries from fall to winter. Pyracantha also has red or orange berries.

White or copper birch offer attractive bark coloring.

NEW FLOWER

A new white rhododendron has been named in honor of President Kennedy. This species took nearly 10 years to develop. Its parents are native Americans of the species Maximun and Pink Pearl and an old English variety. The aim was to develop a rhododendron rugged enough for North American gardens.

STAKING

If you consider it desirable to stake your plants for support, put in the stakes at planting time to reduce danger of injuring the roots or tops.

Supporting stakes should be used when there is danger of damage from storms. It also will keep stems straighter, foliage cleaner and facilitate cultivation.

Try to use stakes that blend with the plant. Bamboo is attractive in the garden. Wooden sticks may be painted green to reduce conspicuousness.

In tying the plants to stakes, begin from the bottom and continue upward as the growth develops. Use a soft material for tying as sharp twines will cut tender growth.

On Dit'

by Denise

Well, "it's home again, home again, America for me!" as the poet says. We arrived back in Monroe in time for those two all-American type affairs, the Miss Louisiana pageant and the Glorious Fourth.

Social affairs seemed to center about young people and their house guests this week. It was a real houseparty over at the GEORGE ROREX's, where daughter JANNA was entertaining JO ANN PRYOR of Houston, Texas; and ANN HIGGINBOTHAM of Hamburg, Arkansas. The Rorexes invited ten young people for hamburger supper and dancing on the patio Wednesday night in honor of the guests.

At noon on Wednesday, SCOTTY CARBONE invited twelve girls for luncheon with these visitors at Bayou DeSaird country club. The table on the porch was covered with a green cloth and centered with an arrangement of yellow and white daisies.

Also on Wednesday was MARIANNE SALISBURY's party honoring MARY LOU AVINGER of Shreveport, guest here of her aunt, ZENIA CHAPMAN. Twenty-five girls of the high school set were invited to meet Mary Lou. Pink roses decorated the living room, while acuba was used to center the dining room table. Marianne served dips and homemade cookies with bottled soft drinks. Mary Lou and the Chapmans left on Thursday afternoon for a weekend at Lake Bruin. They are due back in Monroe today.

Another out of town guest who attended Marianne's party was BOBBIE LESKOE of New Orleans. Bobbie, who is visiting KYLE GREGORY, plans to be here another week.

Some sixty young people, who are to be sophomores in high school this fall, were invited to a party at Pace Lake Clubhouse Thursday evening. SUSAN KILPATRICK and DAVID HOCHSTETLER were hosts for the affair between the hours of six and ten. The group met at Lexington school and proceeded in caravan to the camp, where group games filled the first hour. Hamburger supper was served, after which there was dancing to the record player. Play clothes were the dress for this informal party.

There's a bit of children-changing going on out at the JACK DAVISES. Jean, Jack, and their children went to Dallas last weekend, where they visited Six Flags. From there daughter DIANE flew to Salt Lake City to visit relatives there. DONOVAN FOUTS of Dallas came to Monroe for a several weeks visit with the Davises and DONNA and RALPH WICKER. Donovan is Jean's and Donna's nephew.

Off to camp in Tuxedo, North Carolina, were a group of our young people. They left last week, will be joined later this month by another group planning to attend the second session. TERRY RUBIN, BETHIA BROWN, SUSAN HIGH, MARY KATHERINE McGUIRE, GAYLE KELLY, CONNIE YANCIE, and FAYE CANNON were in the group headed for Camp Glen Arden; while HERMAN McGUIRE is attending nearby Camp Arrowhead.

Guests of the CURTIS COOKS this weekend are his mother, MRS. C. A. COOK; and sister-in-law and brother, BETTY and RAYMOND COOK, all of Dawson, Georgia. They arrived on Friday night for a visit with the Cooks and other relatives here until Tuesday.

Prior to her departure for several weeks in California, MAGGIE ANDERS was honored at a farewell luncheon. Maggie is planning a long visit with a son in the Golden State. THELMA BRECKINRIDGE was hostess for the party Wednesday, attended by close friends of the honoree. She entertained in the Garden Room of Bayou DeSiard country club. A bouquet of pink asters centered the green-covered table.

Before we get our travelling bags completely unpacked, let us tell you about one more highlight of our trip to the British Isles: a stopover in Ireland en route home. Shannon Airport is either a first or last stop on a flying trip to Europe. It has been steadily growing in popularity since the duty free port was opened twenty-five years ago. In the last two years, to tempt travellers to make longer stops, there has begun something called a "Medieval Tour". This outing, which involves a twenty-four hour stopover in Shannon, is the most fun bus tour your reporter has ever made.

Travel back to medieval times is by gradual stages. Busses leave Shannon at four p.m. for a sixty mile drive through the desmesne of the great Earl of Thomond. Departing busses travel through the Shannon housing and industrial estate developments en route to an Irish thatched cottage. Guests are served hot tea and scones and hear a lecture on life as lived on an Irish farm.

Back on the busses, visitors motor through lovely Irish countryside to the village of Sixmilebridge. En route, the colleen who is one's guide points out points of interest: a ruined castle, a fairy ring, a leprechaun tying his shoe. In Sixmilebridge, tour members visit the village pub and are treated to a glass of Guinness, described by the colleen as "the Irish wine".

Next stop is at Quin, where visitors may climb about in the ruins of the Abbey. The chapel is roofless, but dining hall, kitchens, cells, stand complete but deserted. Concealed loud speakers relate the Abbey's history.

Refreshments are served for the third time in two hours at the Old Ground Hotel in Ennis, next stop for the busses. Here one is invited to try the hot Irish coffee with its whipped cream float. Entertainment is provided by children of the village, who perform a program of Irish folk dances. The return trip from Ennis to Shannon is through Clarecastle, Dromoland Estate, and Newmarket-on-Fergus.

A thirty minute break is allowed at Shannon International Hotel, to allow tour members time to don their banquet clothes, if they desire. Then it is time for departure to Bunratty Castle and the highlight of the tour, the medieval banquet.

Arriving guests at Bunratty are greeted by a colleen holding a tray of bread and salt. Each must take a bit of bread, dip it in the salt, and eat as she pronounces a Gaelic blessing to keep him safe in this house. Up the winding turret stairs is the Great Hall, where a reception is held. Mead, that medieval drink fermented from honey, is the drink served.

The banquet itself is held in the Main Guard. One of the guests is chosen to be the evening's Earl of Thomond, with power to throw lawbreakers into the dungeons. Colleens and young men in medieval dress double as minstrels and as waiters at table.

Candles placed the length of the tables provide the illumination. Places are laid with wooden bowls and platters, and daggers which are the only flatware. At the end of each "remove", guests pass their plates to the end of the table, where remains are scraped into large bowls for the "poor prisoners in the dungeons".

Four "removes" comprise the menu. First comes Braume Brose, a vegetable broth. One drinks this out of a wooden bowl, as the dagger offers no help at all. Next remove consists of large platters of spareribs. These look completely raw, but are amazingly well done and tender.

"Chekyn's in Browet" are served as third remove, along with Salat Salamagundy. The quartered chickens are cooked with whole carrots and potatoes in a richly seasoned chicken broth. The Salamagundy looks suspiciously like Cole slaw, and can only be eaten with the fingers. Hoopelade (spiced red wine) is served with the meal. Final remove comprises "Trayne Roste", delicately seasoned sponge rings filled with whipped cream and pureed fruit.

Fitting climax to the meal is the passing round of the snuff box. Beginning with the Earl, each guest is invited to take a sniff and end his meal in medieval style.

For our first week home, and the Fourth besides, we can find no more suitable poem than Stephen Vincent Benet's "American Names".

I have fallen in love with American names,
The sharp names that never get fat,
The snakeskin-titles of mining-claims,
The plumed war-bonnet of Medicine Hat,
Tucson and Deadwood and Lost Mule Flat.
Seine and Piave are silver spoons,
But the spoonbowl-metal is thin and worn.
There are English counties like hunting-tunes
Played on the keys of a post-boy's horn.
But I will remember where I was born.
I will remember Carquinez Straits,
Little French Lick, and Lundy's Lane,
The Yankee ships and the Yankee dates
And the bullet towns of Calamity Jane.
I will remember Skunktown Plain.
I shall not rest quiet in Montparnasse.
I shall not lie easy at Winchelsea.
You may bury my body in Sessex grass,
You may bury my tongue at Champmedy,
I shall not be there. I shall rise and pass.
Bury my heart at Wounded Knee.

"Where The Unusual Is Usual"

Goldwater's Views Stray From Old GOP Platform

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — A comparison of the 1960 Republican Platform with the known stands of Sen. Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.), current front-runner for his party's Presidential nomination, underscores the major turn in direction either the candidate or the party will have to take if Goldwater wins the nomination this year.

Congressional Quarterly compared the planks of the 1960 Platform on all major controversial issues with the positions of Goldwater and his chief rival for the nomination, Gov. William W. Scranton (R Pa.).

On almost every issue, significant differences appeared between the 1960 Platform and the Goldwater position. Scranton, on the other hand, appeared to be in agreement with the platform on virtually every issue.

Apparently sensing the divergence between his stands and those of the 1960 Platform, Goldwater said Jan. 22: "We lost on it and I don't want anything to do with it." Two days later he added: "At best, political platforms are a packet of misinformation and lies."

Scranton, on the other hand, said May 28: "I subscribe to the (Republican) platforms of 1952, 1956 and 1960.

Thus the 1960 Platform — whether it is rejected or reaffirmed — appears likely to be a major issue in San Francisco as the Republican Platform committee seeks to hammer out a 1964 Platform.

The review below shows the 1960 Platform, Goldwater and Scranton views on major subjects:

DEMOCRATIC POLICY

TAXES, GOVERNMENT SPENDING — The 1960 Platform, Goldwater and Scranton all agree on the general principle of the balanced budget and sound money. But the 1960 Platform endorsed tax reforms "to provide greater incentives to economic progress." On the key tax vote of recent years, Goldwater voted against the $11.5 billion 1964 tax cut bill. Scranton endorsed it.

SOCIAL SECURITY — The 1960 Platform endorses expansion of Social Security coverage and liberalization of benefits. Goldwater frequently criticized but voted alternatively for and against expanding the system. He advocated making the Social Security system voluntary until he enountered criticism for that stand in the 1964 primaries. Then he changed his stand to give the system wholehearted endorsement. Scranton opposed the suggestion to make Social Security voluntary.

"Medicare" — The 1960 Platform endorsed a contributory health insurance system for the aged with the option of purchasing private plans. State participation was called for. Goldwater voted against (but subsequently endorsed) the 1950 Kerr-Mills bill for matching federal grants to the states to cover medical expenses of the indigent elderly. Scranton backed Kerr-Mills and favors increased federal efforts to guarantee medical care for the aged outside the Social Security system.

Housing — "Continued effort to clear slums, and promote rebuilding, rehabilitation and conservation of our cities" was called for in the 1960 Platform. Goldwater has voted against all federal housing programs. In 1961, Scranton voted for the Administration's $4.9 billion four-year housing act.

NEWS ANALYSIS

Welfare — The 1960 Platform suggested a wide range of federal and state programs "for the needs which individuals of all age groups cannot meet by themselves." Goldwater has been sternly critical of most public welfare programs, suggesting that welfare should be "a private concern" and that persons are on welfare roles because of "low intelligence or low ambition." Scranton supports many public welfare programs and disputes Goldwater's view on welfare recipients. "It's been my experience that almost everyone in this nation, given the opportunity to do so, would like to work," he said recently.

Education — The 1960 Platform endorsed federal aid for school construction (but not teachers' salaries) and federal aid in college construction, college scholarships and tax relief for parents of students. Goldwater opposes all federal aid to education, whether on the secondary or college level, and has voted accordingly in the Senate. He backs tax relief for parents of children in college, however. Scranton opposes federal aid for secondary education but backs federal aid for college construction and scholarships.

Labor — The 1960 Platform opposes "right to work" laws. Goldwater in 1958 proposed a mandatory national right to work law, but currently favors permitting union shops in states which have laws specifically approving such arrangements. Scranton opposes national or state right-to-work legislation.

The 1960 Platform called for "continued improvement of manpower skills and training to meet a new era of challenges." Goldwater voted against and Scranton for manpower development and training legislation in the 87th Congress.

Agriculture — The 1960 Platform favored relaxed production controls, moderate price supports and "encouragement of farmer-owned and operated cooperatives including rural electric and telephone facilities." Goldwater has called all federal farm programs unconstitutional and has voted against all farm price support and production control bills. In May 1963 he called for abolishing the Rural Electrification Administration. When he was in Congress, Scranton voted with most Republicans against Kennedy Administration farm programs. He is generally opposed to farm supports and controls but cautions against "suddenly" cutting them out altogether.

Civil Rights — Citing the fields of voting, housing, education, employment, school intergration and access to public facilities and services, the 1960 Platform pledged "the full use of the power, recources and leadership of the Federal Government to eliminate discrimination based on race, color, religion or national origin."

Goldwater voted for most weakening amendments but then supported the limited 1957 and 1960 civil rights bills on final passage. In 1964, he voted against cloture to bring the bipartisan civil rights bill to a vote. He voted for most weakening amendments and criticized the public accommodations and fair employment sections. Then he voted against the bill itself, warning that it was unconstitutional and woulr require a "federal police force of mammoth proportions" for enforcement.

Scranton is a strong civil rights advocate and backed the 1964 bill, praising House and Senate Republicans for thire role in writing it. He said he would have voted for cloture if he had been in the Senate.

Defense — The Platform, Goldwater and Scranton all support a strong U. S. defense posture. The Platform endorsed "continued development of the manned bomber well into the missile age," a stand vigorously endorsed by Goldwater.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

General — The 1960 Platform called for a firm American policy against Communist aggression but continued U. S. willingness to negotiate with the U. S. S. R. and programs like cultural exchange.

Goldwater favors an extremely tough line with the Communist, severing of diplomatic ties with the U. S. S. R. under certain conditions, virtually no negotiations and no cultural exchanges. He voted against the 1963 Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty.

Scranton, who was an aide to Secretaries of State John Foster Dulles and Christian A. Herter in 1959-60, favors some elements of "brinkmanship" in U. S. foreign policy. But he also favors negotiations with the Soviet Union "to keep a fissure going between them and the Red Chinese." Unlike Goldwater, he voted in 1961 for establishing the U. S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. He endorsed the 1963 nuclear test ban treaty.

Allies — The 1960 Platform warmly endorsed U. S. participation in NATO and other alliances. Goldwater has said alternatively: "My attitude on alliances is keep your hedges high," and "The greatest force for freedom in the world today is the powerful Atlantic Alliance, the NATO community." Scranton is a strong backer of the Atlantic Alliance.

The United Nations — "We will continue to support and strengthen the United Nations," the 1960 Platform said. Goldwater said in December 1961 that he favored immediate U. S. withdrawal from the U.N., later modified his view to say that the U. S. should withdraw if Red China were admitted. Most recently said he supported the original purposes of the U. N. "unconditionally" and that despite its shortcoming, it was "a useful forum." If the Red Chinese were admitted, the U. S. would "be forced to undertake a serious reassessment of its basic commitments," Goldwater said. Scranton favors continued U.S. participation in the U. N.

Man On Picnic Outing Drowns

SPEARSVILLE (Special) — A 21-year-old Junction City, Ark., man, Stewart Hall, drowned Saturday afternoon while swimming in a farm pond near here.

According to the Union Parish sheriff's department, Hall drowned while on a family picnic outing. Witnesses told investigating deputies that the victim swam out in the pond about 40-50 feet and disappeared under the water.

Recovery attempts were made by several swimmers but they were unable to recover the body. Sheriff's officials recovered the body about 45 minutes after he went down in 12 feet of water.

Union Parish coroner, Dr. J. B. Booth, said death was due to accidental drowning.

Funeral services are incomplete but will be under direction of an El Dorado, Ark., funeral home.

NEW ROLE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bob Conrad, of the defunct "Hawaiian Eye" television series, will star in a new hour-long show titled "The Spy."

ON RUSSIAN TV

Kohler Gives Talk On American Way

MOSCOW (AP)—U.S. Ambassador Foy D. Kohler told the Soviet people in a television address Saturday of the American belief that governments derive "their just powers from the consent of the governed."

"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" are basic rights, Kohler said, adding he was sure the Soviet people shared these basic aspirations.

Kohler's 11½-minute talk, in Russian, was taped for use on the U.S. Independence Day and broadcast during a news program at 5:20 p.m., not what American television people call prime time.

During the day, Kohler was host at the U.S. Embassy's annual Fourth of July celebration, attended by 683 persons, including the highest-ranking Soviet Cabinet officials in town—First Deputy Premier Alexei Kosygin and First Deputy Foreign Minister V. V. Kuznetsov.

During the reception, Kohler had a half-hour chat with Kosygin on the lawn and at one point was seen to pour part of his drink into Kosygin's empty glass.

Premier Khrushchev, on his way home from a Scandinavian tour, and President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who does not attend such embassy affairs for protocol reasons, sent a telegram of Fourth of July congratulations to President Johnson.

In his television address, Kohler said the United States wants to improve understanding with the Soviet Union.

He noted "the various small, but hopeful, steps we have taken during the past two years to improve United States-Soviet relations."

Kohler listed the limited nuclear test ban treaty, the White House-Kremlin hot line, signing of a consular convention, agreements for scientific cooperation and others.

"We look forward to the day when there will be a free movement of our peoples back and forth," he said.

The new civil rights bill was passed after debate, "publicly, open to the eyes of the world, and with due regard for the processes of law," Kohler said.

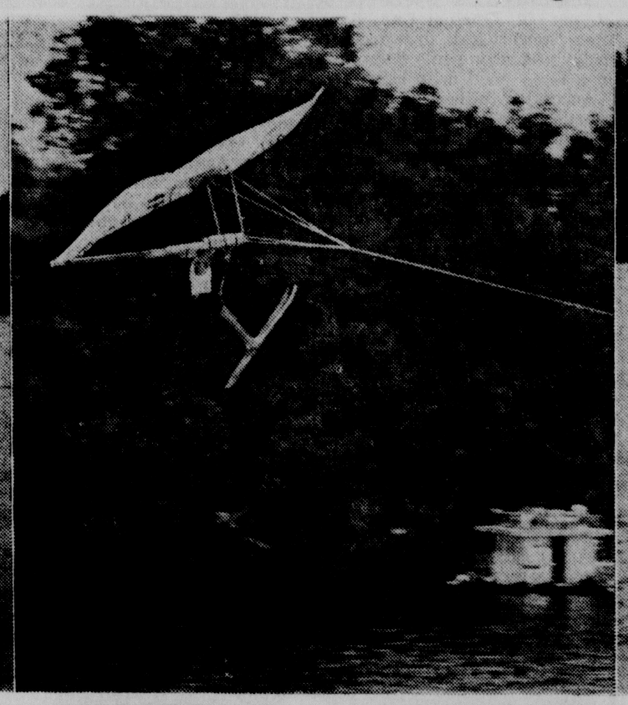
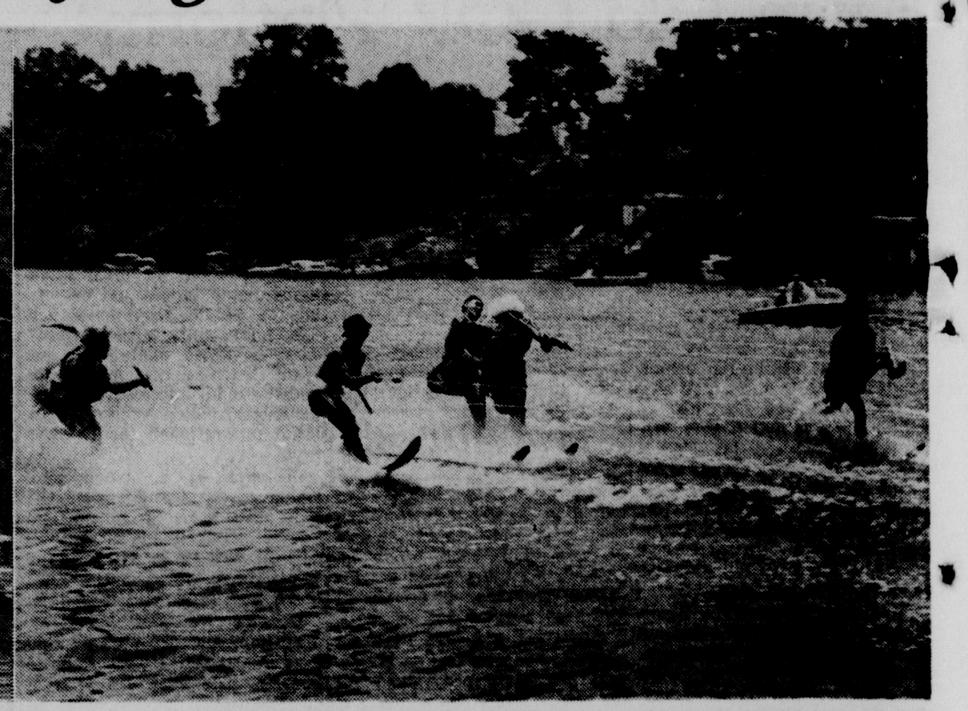
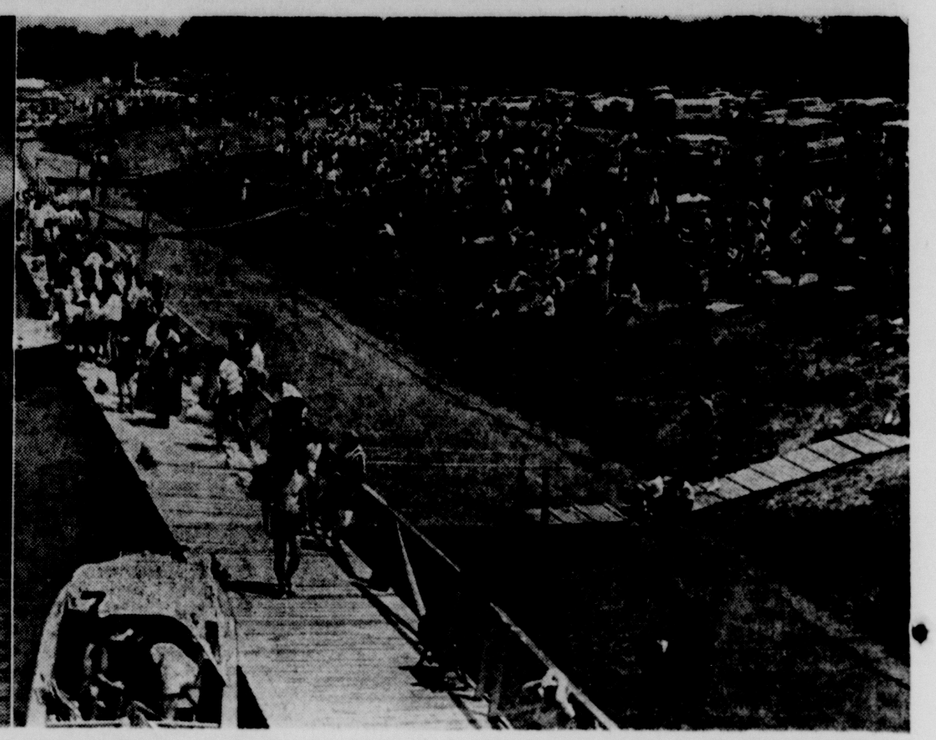
Water Show Highlights Fourth Of July In Twin Cities







FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATIONS in the Twin Cities Saturday were highlighted by a river parade held in honor of the 33 contestants here in Monroe for the 15th annual Miss Louisiana Beauty Pageant. Other activities held in conjunction with the holiday included picnics, barbecues and family outings at the various parks. Twin City swimming pools were filled to capacity as area residents took to the water. Some of the Independent Day festivities at the river included a water carnival at Riverside Park.The river parade was held at 10 a.m. which was followed by a "Boardwalk Parade" at the North Monroe dock at 10:45. At 11 a.m. the Monroe Mariners had a "Skin Diving Race." The professional ski show, featuring the Caddo Sea Bees, was held at 11:15 at the North Monroe Dock. The show was composed of such acts as girls pyramid, clown tactics, tricks, slalom, kite, Santa, ballet girls and show skiis. Professional boat races were held during the afternoon under the auspices of the National Outboard Motor Association. Upper left is a picture of the boat parade of queens; top center, a member of the Caddo Sea Bees exhibits his winged-skiing ability in the kite act. Upper right is a glimpse of the clowning done on water by a group of the Sea Bees. At the lower left is the Monroe Fire Boat which led the parade of queens. TECH FACILITIES

Forestry Camp To Be Dedicated

RUSTON (Special) — Louisiana Tech's new Corney Lake forestry camp facilities near Bernice will be dedicated on Tuesday, July 14, following a noon luncheon at the camp, it was announced by L. P. Blackwell, head of the Tech forestry department.

Guests will be welcomed by Dr. F. Jay Taylor, Tech president. J. K. Vessey of Atlanta, regional forester with the U. S. Forest Service, will give the dedicatory address. Blackwell will be master of ceremonies. The Rev. Douglas McGuire, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church at Ruston, will give the invocation.

The Corney Lake Camp, located 32 miles north of Ruston, has been used in the summertime since 1946 to give students practical experience in forestry to supplement their classroom study.

Construction of the new facilities would not have been possible without the cooperation of industry, with numerous business firms contributing materials for the project, Blackwell said.

Tech forestry students live at the camp in the summers to take courses in forest mensuration, forest engineering, forest ecology, forest genetics and aerial photo - interpretation.

The Tech forestry camp is fence - enclosed on a four-acre site in the Kisatchie National Forest. The new facilities replace those built in 1946 and include a main camp building 26x160 feet.

This contains a 16x24 - foot kitchen, 10x12-foot cooks' quarters and bath, 26x30-foot dining room in which is located two 6x8 - foot darkrooms, a 26x30-foot classroom-library and a 26x56 - foot student dormitory.

The building is of laminated beam construction with a three-inch roof deck of southern pine covered with western red cedar shingles. Outside walls of the building consist of four feet of aluminum screen at the top and five feet o log cabin siding at the bottom. The building has modern incandescent lighting and a concrete floor. There are 10-foot porches on each end.

Adjacent to the main building is an 8x40-foot shower and bath facility for use by students, as well as a 12x18-foot storeroom.

Nearby is a 20x40-foot building for teachers. These quarters have a 10-foot screened porch, a sleeping area for four, a separate bathroom and separate study area.

The camp also has an 8x10-foot building which houses the electric pump for the 1,750-foot deep well.

These enlarged camp facilities replace a tin building that has been used since 1947. A sign has been placed at the entrance by the forestry service identifying the camp.

"Our goal was to build a wooden structure which would not only serve the forestry program but also be a credit to Louisiana Tech and to the wood-using industry," Blackwell said.

The new camp is a modern facility furnished with classroom equipment and supplies to handle the great majority of scientific techniques in teaching forestry students. It is also geared to work into the program of forestry and wood products research which was started as a formalized program within the forestry department in 1962 when the Forestry and Wood Products Research Unit was authorized by President Taylor, Blackwell said.

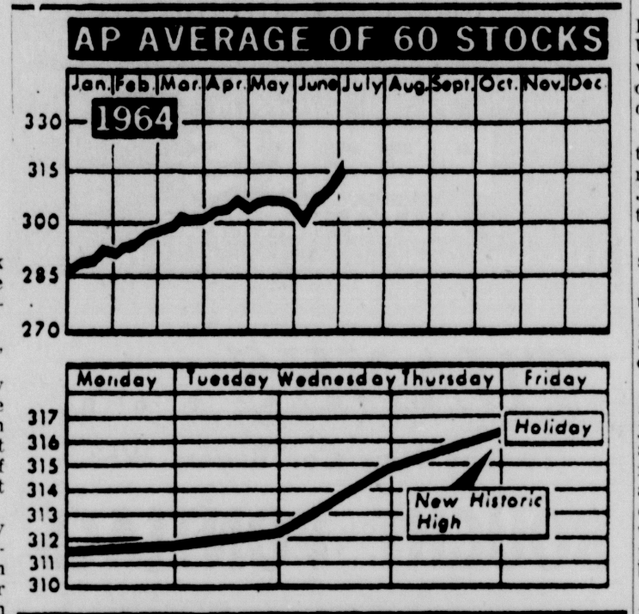
Economy Now In 41st Month Of Steady Rise

Monroe Morning World
Markets, Business and Oil
Sunday, July 5, 1964 — Three-D

Stock Market Rises To New Record Peak



THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks rose for the fourth straight week, closing at a new historic high of 316.3 from 311.5 a week ago. The weekly gain in the average was the largest since last November. The Commodity Index remained unchanged at 164.6. Gains and losses were about evenly divided. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week entered the second half of 1964 at an all-time peak.

The week produced a good, solid gain.

The market, as measured by the averages, rolled up a more or less steady gain all through the first half of the year. It reached the first of a series of historic highs May 7 and kept on going.

The market was nourished by generally good business developments, strong corporation earnings in the first quarter and the income tax cut which became effective in February and began being felt late in the first half.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 30.8 points from 285.5 to 316.3 in the first half. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial climbed 78.52 from 762.95 to 841.47. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 7.58 from 75.02 to 82.60.

However, it wasn't all gain. Hundreds of stocks were still below their highs of the last decade.

The advance in the first half of the year was led mainly by the blue chips which make up the popular averages. But as the averages reached historic heights, brokers expressed belief that investors were ready to start looking for promising secondary issues.

The outlook for the next few months was good.

The Associated Press 60-stock average rose 4.8 to a new high of 316.3. The Dow Jones industrials climbed 10.48 to 841.47. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index advanced 1.14 to 82.60.

Volume for the four-day week — the market was closed Friday for the Fourth of July holiday —totaled 19,383,760 shares, compared with 22,959,882 for the previous five-day week.

Sales totaled $39.4 million par value, compared with $46.10 million last week and $16.8 million the same week a year ago.

Johnston Joins Insurance Firm In West Monroe

James R. Johnston Jr., a 36-year-old West Monroe casualty and life insurance man, has joined Hatten & Norris Insurance Agency as a part owner and full line sales representative, according to an announcement by Bert Hatten, principle owner and founder of the 5½-year-old firm.

Hatten also announced that the firm's name has been changed to "Hatten - Johnston Agency, Inc." As in the past, the agency will be engaged in the sale of all kinds of insurance.

Johnston will sell and service all lines. He comes to the agency with a background of several years experience in the fields of workmen's compensation, general liability, group, life, health and accident insurance.

Hatten said he considered the agency "very fortunate to secure the affiliation of Jim Johnston, a man of high integrity and great knowledge in the insurance business."

Growth in the firm's business and expansion to provide top quality service to its customers "made it imperative that we bring in such a man," according to Hatten.

Johnston expressed "pleasure and confidence in being associated with the firm. I have watched the agency's steady growth and am convinced that it is one of the outstanding insurance firms in this area," Johnston said. "I look forward to a major role in carrying out its established high principles in expansion and delivering customer protection and service."

A resident of 2906 N. 8th St., Johnston is a graduate of Louisiana Tech and holds a degree in business administration. He also graduated from Ouachita Parish High School, after which he served in the U.S. Navy. He is a Presbyterian and a member of Highland Presbyterian Church.

He is married to the former Miss Jane Archibald and is the father of three children.

Cook reported 34 rigs actively drilling or testing in 12 of the parishes, featured by eight each in LaSalle and Concordia. The rest of the total included three each in Avoylles, Catahoula and Grant, two each in Richland and Tensas and one each in Caldwell, Madison, Ouachita, Rapides and Winn.

Twenty - nine new locations were staked, compared with 48 a week ago, and they were spotted in seven parishes. Pacing the list were 15 new locations in Concordia Parish, while six were in Catahoula, three in Avoyelles, two in LaSalle and one each in Caldwell, Richland and Ouachita.

As well four permits were renewed for work in the Morehouse Parish Monroe Field.

July Delivery Cotton Prices Show Strength

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures prices ranged from $2.20 a bale higher to 70 cents a bale lower during the past week on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The greatest strength was shown in the nearby July delivery and was produced by short covering and evening-up operations. The contract goes off the board July 9.

The only other trades were made in nearby October and December.

Trading interest was limited by uncertainity with respect to the role of futures during the coming season under a new price support program.

Exports of the staple by this country for the week ended June 29 totaled 82,000 bales compared with 89,000 one week earlier and 47,000 bales in the same period of 1963, the exchange said.

CHARMING DECEIVER: This handsome ranch-like exterior actually is more than it seems to be. Inside are 8½ rooms, two of them on a second floor which is not readily apparent from the front but which overlooks a large rear patio. A clever design for a family which needs four bedrooms yet wants a house with a ranchy appearance.

ACCENT ON STAIRWAY: No use hiding these attractive stairs in some darkened corner. Architect Samuel Paul has placed them in paneled foyer to make them distinctive feature of house.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Multi-Level Ranch Home Provides Four Bedrooms

By ANDY LANG

Selecting the right house for the family should be a pleasure — and usually is. But this normally exciting venture can become a burden if your family has growing pains and you can't find a house for your budget.

A multi-level house is usually the answer when you need a house with four bedrooms. Of all the multi-level types, the 1½-story most nearly approaches the comforts of a ranch house while still providing the economy of building up rather than out.

Today's House of the Week, a 1½-story creation of architect Samuel Paul, is a case in point. Look at it from the front and you see a charming, rustic, low-slung ranch silhouette. Yet it has a second floor with two spacious bedrooms and a ful bath. Because of its location, overlooking the rear patio, it does not disturb the ranch-style street view.

There are 6½ rooms on the first floor of this cleverly-designed house, H-38 in the weekly series. In addition to the living room, dining room, kitchen, dinette and family room, there are two large bedrooms and a bathroom with an unusual layout. A small powder room, equipped with a vanity and a basin, precedes the full bath, thus effectively doubling usage of the bathroom when necessary.

Studied detail has been incorporated into the floor plan. Every major room is a corner room with a resulting abundance of cross ventilation. There is a pocket-sliding door which can separate the entire lower bedroom area from the rest of the house. A stone fireplace, with an adjoining space ideally suited for a built - in music center, serves as a focal point in the living room. There is a wide arch between the living room and the dining room, which is in turn separated from the patio by sliding doors.

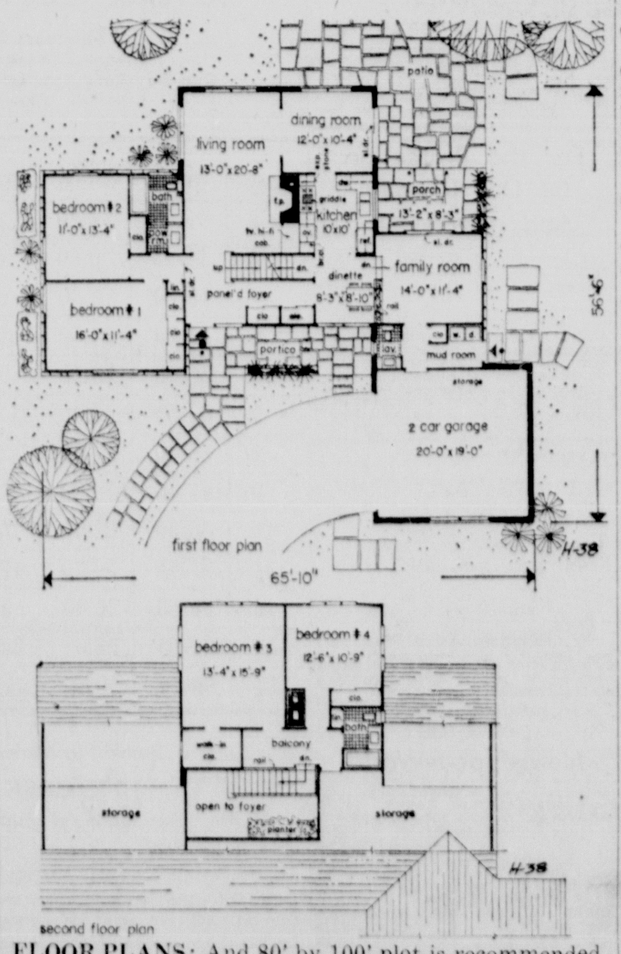
The kitchen has a number of interesting features. There are such things as a range top with a built-in griddle backed up to an exposed stone wall, an adjoining oven and broiler, and enclosed dishwasher and a double-bowl sink under a large window overlooking the porch. The dinette has its own charm, with bay-style windows overlooking the front portico and separated from the family room by an attractive rail and planter. The adjoining family room is two steps below the dinette and close enough to the kitchen for serving and control. There are sliding doors leading to the covered rear porch and an abundance of wall space.

Also on the first floor are a service area, complete with a lavatory, mud room, laundry space and closet, all adjacent to the side entrance and convenient to the kitchen as well. The two-car garage has a side entrance shelters the door from street view.

The extra upstairs space is reached via a wooden stairs located in the wood-paneled entrance foyer with a cathedral ceiling. Architect Paul wisely decided to highlight the access to the second floor rather than hide or disguise it, as is often done in 1½-story homes.

A final note: although the second floor is well integrated into the design of the house, you can leave much of the space unfinished until actually needed.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-38.



FLOOR PLANS: And 80' by 100' plot is recommended for H-38, which provides 1,594 square feet of living area on the first floor and 584 square feet on the second floor. Note the generous-sized rooms on both floors.

Oil Imports Quotas May Bring Appeal

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson may be asked to reduce oil imports sharply.

Independent producers are dissatisfied with the July-December quotas set by the Interior Department last week for the mandatory program to control oil imports.

The independents have indicated depressed conditions within their industry justify a direct appeal to the White House even though some administration sources believe such action in an election year would be inadvisable.

Johnson, as a senator from Texas, championed congressional action that led to the mandatory controls program. Two weeks after becoming President, however, Johnson announced Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, and not the White House, would chart the government's basic oil policies.

The independents asked Udall on May 25 to reduce imports about 500,000 barrels a day in the final six months of 1964. The new quotas, however, indicate licensed oil imports the remainder of the year will be about 60,000 barrels a day higher than the January-June level.

The 500,000 barrel a day reduction request was placed before Udall by H. A. True Jr., president of the 7,000-member Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Grain Futures Lacking Force; Little Net Gain

CHICAGO (AP) — Factors in the grain futures market lacked any enduring influence last week and prices on the Board of Trade showed little net change.

Weather became the guiding consideration in most commodities, but of fading consequence in wheat as harvest of that grain moved toward completion and almost out of danger.

Speculators watched weather forecasts closely for application to soybean trade especially. Prices of that commodity reacted rather quickly to both short-and long-term outlooks.

Wheat closed ⅛-⅞ cent a bushel higher, July new grade $1.40¾-41; corn ¾-1⅛ lower, July $1.22⅞-23; oats ½ higher to ½ lower, July 60¾ cents; rye 1⅜-2⅜ higher, July $1.25⅜-½; soybeans 1-1¼ lower, July $2.49⅛-⅜.

Mayor In Fountain

OLNEY, Ill. (AP)— Mayor Kenneth Berger finished his dedication speech for a new lighted fountain at the Olney City Park Saturday and promptly fell in the fountain.

TO BLOCK DRIVE

GOP Congressmen Protest Goldwater

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five Republican members of Congress led an Independence Day burst of opposition to Sen. Barry Goldwater Saturday as party liberals strove to block the Arizonan's drive to the GOP presidential nomination.

The five, all from Eastern industrial-states, drew support from the Ripon Society, a young GOP research group, which charged that Goldwater, "by his actions in Congress, had disqualified himself to be the leader of the party of Lincoln."

Negro leader Roy Wilkins said meanwhile that he thought Goldwater was a "little optimistic" in hoping the racial issue won't be part of the presidential campaign. The NAACP chief said Goldwater had "thrown the Negro question overboard" and invited criticism when he voted against the civil rights bill signed into law by President Johnson Thursday.

The anti-Goldwater statements came as the two principal GOP White House candidates —Goldwater and underdog Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania — each rested on his home grounds before final preconvention campaign sorties.

Scranton conferred with political advisors at his home in Indiantown Gap, Pa., while frontrunner Goldwater donned Western garb to participate as grand marshal in a rodeo at Prescott, Ariz.

The legislators issued a statement declaring that only Scranton could win the "decisive support" the party needs this election year in the nation's industrialized and big city areas.

The five were Sens. Clifford P.Cawe, N.J., Kenneth B. Keating, N. Y., and Hugh Scott, Pa., and Reps. Abner W. Sibal, Conn and Silvio O. Conte, Mass. Of the quintet, all but Sen. Case are seeking re-election.

They asserted that Scranton was the "right candidate" to win in such heavily suburban states as Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and California.

The Ripon Society issued its statement from Ripon, Wis., where the Republican party was founded 110 years ago. It said that Republicanism now faces "its greatest internal crisis" since its birth.

In a "declaration of conscience," the group of GOP intellectuals, most of whom range in age from the early 20's to the mid-30's, said the party should not sacrifice its principles to the "conscience of a conservative."

"It must choose within the next two weeks," the statement said, "whether it will embrace a candidate who has, by his actions in congress and by his silence in the face of national crisis, disqualified himself to be the leader of the party of Lincoln."

Mexico To Vote For New Head, Senators Today

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Ten million Mexicans vote Sunday in a national election almost certain to name Gustavo Diaz Ordaz, a 53-year-old political pro, president for the next six years.

Ordaz is the candidate of the ruling Party of Revolutionary Institutions (PRI). It has not lost a major election in 40 years.

The term of the incumbent, Adolfo Lopez Matheos, expires on Dec. 1, and he is not eligible to seek re-election.

In addition to a new president, Mexicans will elect 60 senators and 178 members of the Chamber of Deputies. It is almost a foregone conclusion that the PRI will remain in firm control of both legislative houses.

All army and police units were ordered to barracks for the weekend, but officials said no election day disturbances were expected. The campaign has been one of the most peaceful in Mexican history.

Diaz Ordaz' only opponent on the ballot is Dr. Gonzalez Torres, 44, the candidate of the conservative National Action Party (PAN). He is a law professor who has been identified with Roman Catholic lay organizations and is a leader in the campaign to amend an article of the Mexican constitution covering public education.

POOR OLD DAD

NEW YORK (AP) — Father apparently runs a poor second to Mom. Western Union said it handled about 250,000 greetings to Dad this year, about half the volume of Mothers Day.

WANT-AD WONDERS Trade Mark

Elvis Buys Roosevelt Yacht Through Want Ad

"To be auctioned," said the Want Ad, "the Potomac, presidential yacht of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt." Singer Elvis Presley read the ad and bought the ship for $55,000.

After trying unsuccessfully to give it to two charities as a national monument — Presley donated it to St. Jude Hospital in Memphis, then sold it to a real estate developer for them.

Elvis turned the receipts of the sale over to St. Judes. They totaled $62,500.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR FOLKS:

If you have slip covers that never stay put, take a piece of newspaper, roll it up (rolling-pin fashion) and cover it with a piece of the same material as your slip covers.

Push this down behind the cushions where the slip cover is ordinarily tucked in.

This will prevent the slip cover from slipping out.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

After your broom has been worn down to a stubble, don't throw it away.

Have your husband cut off the handle about halfway, then dig a small hole in the ground near your back door and push the broom handle into the ground. Fill the hole around the metal part of the broom, so that just the stubble sticks out. You have the best shoe-scraper ever . . . and for free!

Clayton E. Moyer

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep the food in lunch boxes cold, I fill empty plastic vitamin pill bottles with water and freeze them. I use one or two in the lunch box to keep the sandwiches cold. Works wonderfully and costs nothing.

Mrs. M. F.

DEAR HELOISE:

Please tell your readers that lemons and oranges, when cut and squeezed at room temperature, give more juice than the chilled fruit.

H. T. R.

True.

Heloise

PORKY POPCORN

DEAR HELOISE:

I wonder how many people use bacon grease to add a special zest to popcorn?

Just substitute the bacon grease for the cooking oil and you are in for a delicious surprise!

This idea was passed on to me by a friend and has been a favorite in our house ever since.

Mrs. Bernard Fridley

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm a bachelor on a tight budget.

When it comes to dried fruits, I have found that I can wash them, put them in a pan of warm water and set it over the pilot light on the top of my stove. I add a little sugar and put a lid on . . . no cooking is necessary.

The next day I have perfect prunes, etc.

I always add a slice of lemon to any kind of dried fruit when using this method. It's great!

George Crump

DEAR HELOISE:

For mothers who have babies still in play pens . . . about the grandest thing I have found from which to make a play pen pad is an old mattress pad.

This may be covered in patterned percale, seersucker or other washable material and thrown in the washing machine.

Marie L.

DEAR HELOISE:

Tuck the instructions for washing your new drapes or panels inside one of the hems. By the time they get soiled and ready to wash, instead of trying to remember, "Now, how do I wash these?" the instructions will be right there where they are needed.

Harry Carol

Harry, it takes a MAN to tell us women SOME things. You're the greatest.

HELOISE

DEAR HELOISE:

A small vegetable dish turned upside-down and placed in the bottom of a salad bowl before mixing a tossed salad, will allow all the excess moisture to accumulate in the bottom of the bowl and leave the salad crisp for serving when removed from the refrigerator.

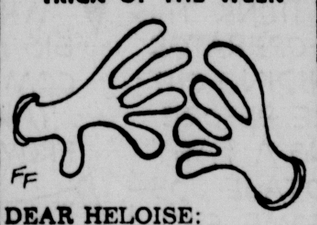
Flora Trout

* * *

And if you want the salad to stay real cold and yet not freeze, you can put a few ice cubes under the dish. I've done it and it works!

Heloise

TRICK OF THE WEEK



DEAR HELOISE:

If you've ever found yourself with two rubber gloves for one hand, just turn one glove inside out and you have a new pair!

Mrs. K. R. Weigand

DEAR HELOISE:

I pack lunch for a family of five, and I make my sandwiches once a week (on week ends, when Daddy is home and he can help.) Before putting our sandwiches in waxed paper bags we set up the iron, fold over the edge of the bag after the sandwiches are all put in, and gently wipe the iron across it. The heat from the iron slightly melts the wax and seals the paper.

We put them in the freezer. There is no moisture collected on the sandwiches and they are perfect every time.

Nellie

DEAR HELOISE:

To remove a large plant from its container for repotting: If it's too heavy to handle, just tip it on its side and put the garden hose into the hole in the bottom of the pot and turn on the water. If the hole is larger than the hose, pack a strip of cloth around the end of the hole to fit.

This will loosen the soil around the sides of the pot or tub as well as at the bottom, and the plant is then easily removed.

Mrs. J. M. Hahn

NO JOKER!

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have plastic playing cards which stick together . . . take an old powder puff and dust each card ever so lightly with talcum on both sides.

The powder wears off after a time, and then it will be necessary to repeat the process.

"Everyday"

DEAR HELOISE:

When the weather is damp, the salt in the shaker sticks. Did you know that you could put a dozen or so toothpicks inside the shaker and it will prevent sticking?
